CZECH TROOPS BACK ON BORDER

HURRICANE PHOTOS! Graphic Views of Storm-Swept East

Air view of flooded New London, Conn., showing boats jumbled together.

As the death toll in the New England hurricane and flood mounted to at least 450, residents in six states counted their property losses which ran into millions of dollars. This air view shows New London, Conn., waterfront with harbor boats jumbled together like matchwood.

Members of the Nassau county police at Williston, L. I., are pictured at left with rubber rafts in which they started to evacuate more than 100 families marooned by the floods caused by a five-day downpour. On top of the rains came a hurricane, spreading death and destruction. At right, an ingenious Brooklyn youngster uses a home-made gondola to go to the grocery. The umbrella lends a distinctive touch to the Brooklyn gondolier.

Their frame home in the direct path of the devastating hurricane which swept the east coast, a mother and her child survey the storm's damage. Note how wall of dwelling leans against the doorway. They live at Long Beach, L. I., where property damage was very heavy.

Marooned along with its parents in flood-swept Hartford, Conn., a baby is rescued by volunteer workers. Buggy and all is carried to dry land. Flood conditions in New England states followed a terrific hurricane which took a death toll of more than 450.

Peril Grows, Storm Toll Near 500

RIVERS RISE IN 6 STATES HIT BY GALE

Hundreds Build Dykes to Keep Connecticut River Out of Harassed Hartford.

SPEED AID TO HOMELESS

Rhode Island's 229 Deaths 'Only Scrapes Surface,' Rescuers Report.

(By Associated Press)

The danger of flood drew closer today to many sections in the hurricane-hit northeast, as the long list of the storm dead approached 500 and continued to increase.

In Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York and New Jersey rivers were rising. At many points rain fell.

Sections of Connecticut appeared most gravely menaced. At Hartford, the "insurance capital," a thousand booted men working with desperate urgency piled sandbags upon the Connecticut river's dykes along a half-mile stretch of riverfront. Already, 1,400 were homeless in that city and 10 per cent of its total area was under water.

Worst Since 1928.

For the storm area generally disastrous inundations appeared unlikely—but fresh suffering and more damage certain.

A dread trickle of reports, seeping through walls of silence imposed by shattered communications systems, swelled the roll of victims until the disaster stood as the worst hurricane in the United States since 1928 when a storm swooped out of the Caribbean sea,

GOOD OLD FALL!

New Season Arrives at Noon, Brings Summer Back.

Fall arrived at 12 noon today amid summer weather and an unusual calendar quirk which divided day and night into exactly 12 hours each.

Although unheralded, the equinox change at exactly noon is rare, U. S. Naval observatory officials pointed out. The sun and the calendar don't often get together for an equinox to divide day and night equally, they said.

After predicting fair and warmer weather for a week only to see it rain and get colder, the weatherman finally won out today. The mercury was expected to climb well past 70 degrees this afternoon, and skies were cloudless.

Considerably warmer weather, now centered in the Mississippi valley area, is due to reach this section Saturday or Sunday to end the cold spell.

'Be A Man!', Kennedy Admonishes Davey

'Reign Of Terror' Hit By Secretary In Convention Plea.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Still amazed by rapid-fire developments, the Ohio Democratic convention boiled today with undercurrent repercussions from a demand by Secretary of State William J. Kennedy that Gov. Martin L. Davey "unshackle the state employes" and permit them to support his party's nominees for election.

Charging reports indicated a "reign of terror" among state employes since Charles Sawyer defeated Davey for renomination in the August primary, Kennedy told the convention last night that the time had come "to substitute the clicking heels for the pussyfoot."

An abstract of the state Democratic platform, as drafted and approved by the convention today, will be found on Page 2.

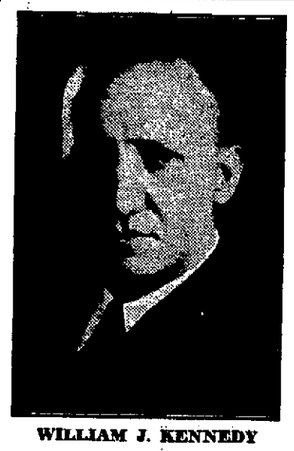
In All-Night Session.

Shortly afterward, the convention's program committee began an all-night session and it was believed that the party's declaration of principles would not be completed before late today.

While the delegates alternately cheered and some gasped, Kennedy continued:

"Democrats of Ohio, we can't kid the public. We haven't hushed up anything. . . . You know this sordid story or you certainly ought to know it.

"State employes move to their work on tip-toe, haunted by the dread fear of dismissal for political activity in which they are afraid to take part. . . .



WILLIAM J. KENNEDY

"In the name of everything decent and manly, I right here and right now call upon Martin L. Davey to unshackle the state employes in the non-classified service. I call upon Martin L. Davey to give back to thousands of fine men and women the God-given right to vote."

'Dems Helped You.

Speeding toward a climax of his verbal resentment against Davey's order for state employes to "boycott" the Democratic convention, Kennedy reminded the governor that the Democratic party "has carried you to heights you probably never dreamed of when you were a struggling lad."

He urged Davey to show "gratitude" for the party's favors and concluded:

"With all the sincerity at my

Court Order Disbars Bell, Lawyer Here for 25 Years

Decree Obtained by County Bar Committee Charges Attorney Failed 'To Account for Clients' Money.'

Harry F. Bell, Mansfield attorney for more than 25 years today had been disbarred from the practice of law in Ohio on a court order obtained by the grievance committee of the Richland County Bar association.

An entry filed in common pleas court late yesterday said Bell had been found guilty of charges of failure "to account for sums of money he has collected for various clients," failure "to discharge obligations imposed upon him by his office," and "has personally conducted himself so as to bring disrepute generally upon the legal profession."

First Here In 10 Years.

The disbarment action is the first in the county in more than 10 years.

County Prosecutor Glenn W. Marriott, chairman of the bar association's grievance committee, said an investigation started last June revealed that Bell had "misappropriated funds" and had been "guilty of unprofessional conduct involving moral turpitude" since 1933.

Marriott said funds involved amounted to "an imposing figure" but he understood that no criminal

The appeal was made by Mrs. Gertrude English, secretary of the chapter, who received authorization from national headquarters to ask for contributions.

REGAIN CONTROL OF FRONTIER IN SUDETEN SECTOR

Troops Re-occupy Posts They Abandoned Day Earlier, Apparently Under Orders of New Premier To Maintain Discipline.

BULLETIN

PARIS — (AP) — Radical-Socialist deputies tonight quoted Premier Edouard Daladier as declaring that "if Germany enters Czechoslovakia France will face her engagements."

BULLETIN

GENEVA—(AP)—Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet commissar of foreign affairs, told the League of Nations today that Soviet Russia might voluntarily go to the aid of Czechoslovakia "but no one can insist on this help as a duty."

BULLETIN

STRASBOURG, France — (AP) — Troops along France's Belgian and German frontiers were ordered today to assume "positions of alert," it was reported in sources close to the general staff. Such an order, issued by the government, means that troops take up positions ready for an emergency.

(By United Press)

EGER, (Sudeten Area) Czechoslovakia—Czechoslovak army units, apparently upon orders from the new Prague government, were in control of Sudetenland today.

The troops began re-occupying frontier towns soon after Gen. Jan Syrovy, head of the army, became premier and war minister. They carried full military equipment and took over the barracks from which they had retired the day before when Czechoslovakia bowed to the "sacrifice" decision of Great Britain and France.

Fighting broke out in Herzogenreuth, Koenigsberg, Falkenau, Graslitz, Weipert and Oberloma. Sixteen were killed in these areas shortly after the Czech troops returned.

German reports said that Russia had dispatched airplanes and pilots to aid Czechoslovakia.

Here, and at nearby Asch the tension mounted hourly. The Sudeten German population which up until dusk yesterday had prematurely celebrated their incorporation into Germany. People feared the Czechs would take reprisals for the display of the Nazi swastika, the singing of "Horst Wessel" and "Deutschland Uber Alles," and the exuberant demonstrations.

The Czech authorities and soldiers had looked on dejectedly while the Sudetens held their "anschluss celebration." Today, however, they again were in control, instructed to carry out Gen. Syrovy's order to maintain national discipline.

The Czech authorities refused numerous requests of the population, including one for permission for the Sudeten German legions now refuged in Germany to return

GODESBERG: Hitler Reply Sent To Chamberlain; Europe Tense

BULLETIN

LONDON — (AP) — Fuehrer Adolf Hitler has informed Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain that he intends to march into Czechoslovakia "because there is no alternative," a most reliable source revealed today.

GODESBERG, Germany,—(AP)—Reichsfuehrer Hitler's reply to Prime Minister Chamberlain's letter which this morning suspended their conversations on the European crisis reached the British statesman at his Petersberg hotel this evening.

There was no immediate indication of the tenor of the reply nor of when the talks would be resumed.

Meanwhile the negotiations in which Chamberlain is trying to assure Europe's peace at an unprecedented price continued in a state of tense suspense.

Half an hour before he was to meet Hitler at the fuehrer's Hotel Dreesen headquarters here this morning the British Prime Minister sent his letter across the Rhine calling off the meeting. Then he stayed in his hotel suite awaiting the reply.

The announcement postponing the talks, at least until later in the day, was made from Chamberlain's hotel at Petersberg. Previously he and Hitler had been scheduled to meet at Godesberg, across the Rhine, this morning.

Persons in close touch with both sides expressed fear that developments foreshadowed a breakdown of the conversations, designed to prevent a European war through redrawing the map of Chechoslovakia.

There was no indications that

Now, Mr. Hitler, The Kaiser Thought So Too

LONDON — (UNS) — Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler has bluntly informed Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain that Germany can defeat both Great Britain and France if war comes, it was reported in reliable diplomatic quarters today as the sudden hitch developed in the Anglo-German conversations at Godesberg.

PARIS: Russia Warns Poles She Will Fight Czech Invasion

PARIS — (AP) — Havas, French news agency, in a Moscow dispatch today reported that Soviet Russia had notified Poland she would renounce the Russian-Polish nonaggression treaty without further warning if Polish troops moved into Czechoslovakia.

The Havas dispatch said:

"The Soviet note was based on information announcing concentration of Polish troops on the Czechoslovak frontier and on reports, not denied up to the present time by the Polish government, that the country's troops were preparing to cross the frontier."

The note added:

"The Soviet government is awaiting denial of these reports."

(Warsaw dispatches have reported that Poland was demanding the cession to her of the Polish-inhabited Teschen area, northern Czechoslovakia, and that the Polish army was concentrating troops preparatory to action in that region).

Pirates' Chances Brighten

By SID FEDER
Associated Press Sports Writer.

BETWEEN now and the time Pie Traynor sits down to figure out the Pittsburgh pitcher he'll throw at the Yankees to start the world series, you're going to hear a lot of that "sweet revenge" build-up in favor of Jim Tobin.

Of course, there's the little matter of sewing up the National league pennant still in front of Pie and his Pirates, but after knocking off the Brooklyns twice, 6-0 and 11-6, yesterday, there doesn't seem much the Bucs can do any more about getting out of it. They're in a spot now where they can drop three of their ten remaining games and still win.

After Yanks' Scalp.

There are whispers Tobin, a Yankee castoff, is looking for a chance to go to work on them thar Yanks. The world champions obtained him from Oakland in '36, then left him there to undergo an appendectomy, and in '37, after bringing him up again, they sold him to the Bucs. The story now is that Jim doesn't figure he got a square shake.

Yesterday, his four-hit job in the opener took all the starch out of the Dodgers. To this corner, he looks like the Pirate pitcher who can give the Yanks the most trouble.

As a result of his tossing yesterday, along with Arky Vaughn's slick stickwork in the nightcap, the Bucs left for the west still boasting a 3½ game edge over the Cubs, who also turned in a double-win over the Phils in the first full National league program in four days. Bill Lee equalled a National league record with his fourth straight shutout, by a 4-0 count, in the opener, and Clay Bryant came through 2-1 in the afterpiece. The Giants regained third place by kicking the Cincinnati Reds around twice, 6-1 and 2-1.

The Yankees finally snapped out of their eight-year record six-game losing streak by overpowering the White Sox, 7-4. Red Rolfe and Joe Gordon supplied home run power in this lone game on the American league card.

Boston's Bees, determined to hang onto fifth place in the senior circuit chase, nipped the Cardinals twice, 6-5 and 4-1.

Madison Primed for New London Tonight

Fendrick's Rams Seek First Victory Over Wildcats Under Incandescents.

FOOTBALL machines of Madison and New London will renew a series they lapsed back in 1934 when they roll into action under the bulbs on the Rams' gridiron at 8 p. m. today.

Tonight's tussle is an important affair for both Class B clubs, and according to reports from both camps, the Rams and Wildcats are sharpened for the renewal of the rivalry.

Madison Favored.

Coach Al Fendrick's Madison club is slightly favored tonight due to its rout of Sunbury, 60 to 12, last week, but the Rams' coach is not taking anything for granted.

He remembers the whippings his teams took from the Wildcats in 1933 and 1934, and refuses to count touchdowns until the whistle blows to end the soiree tonight.

Fendrick will throw what appears to be one of his slickest offensive machines on the field tonight, with Capt. Joe Miller and Gene Harmon the spearheads of the attack.

Harmon scored four touchdowns on as many spectacular jaunts in the inaugural, and he will bear watching tonight.

Madison also produced a deceptive passing game against Sunbury, with both Harmon and Miller throwing. Bill Wilkins scored three successive touchdowns in one period on passes from this pair in the Sunbury tiff.

Changes Likely.

Fendrick indicated that a couple of changes may alter the lineup he used in the opening game.

Tonight will mark the Rams until Oct. 14 when Upper Sandusky comes to Madison field.

McMullen, 507 Paces Scoring

Mary McMullen annexed scoring honors in the Women's bowling league at the Meder alleys last night with a 507 total, which included games of 159, 156, and 182. However, her team, Morgan Dry Cleaners, dropped three games to Shelley's Chocolates, led by Dintaman's 450 and Hager's 440.

Reno's 468 and Handwark's 465 led the Office Cafe to a sweep over Harvey's Sample Shoes, led by Schuster's 475, and the Moderne Beauty Shoppe, paced by Meder's 452, won a pair of decisions from the Richland Printers, who were led by Linster's 444.

Mansfield-Massillon Game Holds Ohio Grid Spotlight

1927 when the Tygers and Shelby Whippets attracted 9,000 football-mad spectators is anticipated Saturday while the two Tiger-nicknamed clubs collide.

Figures In Race.

While the outcome of the game will not definitely decide the state championship, it will help determine the mythical crown on which both Mansfield and Massillon have pointed their sights.

McMullen

State-wide interest is manifest in their engagement at the Tyger lair for this reason, and Massillon alone is expected to provide a crowd large enough to pack the east side of the field.

The bands and the drum corps of the two schools will be seated in special bleachers at each end of the gridiron to supply additional reservations for visitors.

Neither team has received a difficult test so far this season. Mansfield opened with an unimpressive 14 to 0 victory over Akron West in its inaugural, and Massillon whipped McKeesport, Pa., 19 to 6, in its debut.

Saturday's game will be for "blood," and while the outcome is doubtful, it should be packed with thrills. A one-sided affair such as the Tigers made of the 1936 game here, is not expected.

Massillon is a popular pre-game choice. It produced virtually flawless football in its opener, displaying a fast-charging line and a swift backfield with a diversified attack.

Produce In Practice.

Coach Russ Murphy's Tygers gave a promising but inconsistent performance against West, but if their performance in practice sessions this week is a criterion, Mansfield followers will see a different looking outfit in action Saturday.

Fired by the possibility of being the first Ohio team to halt Massillon in four years, the Tygers, apparently, are prepared for what is expected to be one of their toughest assignments this season.

What tactics the rival strategists will employ in their attempt to gain victory Saturday remains to be seen. Both clubs have shown power on the attack, but their aerial games featured the initial performances.

In view of the success they enjoyed in the air last week, the two well-matched foes are likely to operate their throwing department overtime Saturday.

Massillon has a sensational passer in George Slusser, with Fred Toles an outstanding receiver. Capt. Rich Nagle will probably do most of the pitching for the Tygers, but Murphy has other capable throwers in Al Schwaner, Dick McMullen, Ike Smith and Red Lemunyon.

Murphy expects to send the same lineup he used against the Cowboys into the fray.

Coach Paul Brown indicated that the Massillon lineup may include one change. Bud Lucius was used at a tackle berth in practice this week, according to reports from Massillon, and he may get the call over Bud Henderson, a sophomore. Lucius has two seasons of utility line service behind him.

Holds Weight Edge.

Comparing the playing weights released by the coaches, Mansfield will hold the edge, but it is doubtful whether the difference can be regarded as an advantage.

Massillon packs considerably more speed than the Tygers, we understand, and this is expected to offset any weight advantage the men of Murphy will hold.

Word was received today that Capt. Red Snyder, one of Massillon's chief backfield menaces, suffered a sprained ankle in workouts this week, but the injury is not serious enough to keep him out of the starting lineup.

Saturday's game will be the third between Mansfield and Massillon in their modern series. The invading Tigers won the first game of the rivalry two years ago by a lop-sided score and the two clubs battled to a 6 to 6 tie last fall.

Heilman Team Edges Ringside in Scoring

Turns In High 2809 Total to Beat Cafe by Three Pins; Graf Leads Individuals.

THE Heilman Grocers and Ringside Cafe were high in the scoring department in the third week of the Commercial B league season at the Meder lanes last night.

With Bechtel contributing a 605, the Grocers came through with a 2809 total, which was climaxed with a 1024 game, and took a pair of tilts from the Yuncker Sports, who rolled out a 2756.

The Ringside team was only three pins short of the Grocers as they won two games from the Mansfield Rugs. Maier led the Cafe with a 618.

The Satterlee Restaurant ran its winning streak to eight games before bowing in the last tilt of its match with the Kochheiser Sports.

Jack Graf of the Burghardt Cafe won individual scoring laurels with a string of 212-231-196—639, and led his team to a 2755 total and three wins over the Mansfield Printers.

The Shelby Cycles, paced by Swank's 607, won a pair of games from Ohio Public Service and Office Cafe, scoring leader in the first two weeks, dropped to a 2447 last night, but annexed three decisions at the expense of Met's Auto Supplies.

Miller Speeds Up K-B's Practice Pace

Squad of 50 Candidates Working at Columbia Park for Opening Game With Detroit Sunday.

WORKING with a squad of 50 candidates, Coach Gip Miller stepped up the pace on the practice field at the Fairground today as the Kallmerten & Baer semi-pro gridsters resumed preparations for their initial tussle of the season with the Pi Rho Phi aggregation of Detroit at League park Sunday.

Well satisfied with the material on hand, Miller is finding it difficult to pick a starting lineup due to the number of outstanding prospects.

Pleased With Line.

Miller is especially pleased with the caliber of the line material, and expects to mould a powerful defensive unit in front of a backfield which remains doubtful.

Although admitting that the lineup is doubtful, the Kallmerten & Baer coach intimated that he would put a ball club in Sunday's game that will give a good account of itself.

He did not predict a victory as he realizes the task confronting the Coals, but seemed satisfied over the prospects of his team holding its own against the former Michigan semi-pro champions.

According to word received by Business Manager John Villella, the Detroit club includes the same personnel that it did last year when it halted the Mansfield Pros.

Among the players Mansfield semi-pro football followers will remember is Halfback Larry Martens, who kicked the field goal that enabled the Detroiters to trim Mansfield last season.

Jodway In Lineup.

Victor Jodway, 175-pound quarterback, will also be remembered. He is the fellow who returned a punt 60 yards and was almost loose for a touchdown until Bill Distl nailed him. This was the run which set the stage for Marten's game-winning field goal.

Miller is working with the largest squad ever to try for berths on a semi-pro team in Mansfield. Among the former Mansfield high stars listed as candidates are Paul Sturgeon, Dan Stehle, Gil Weigand, Harper Au, Gaylord Bucher, Christ Kilzer, George Hummel and Vern Heiser.

Possum Run to Stage Trophy Dance Saturday.

The annual "trophy dance" will be held at the Possum Run clubhouse Saturday night, Irish McGee, club owner, announced today.

Trophy awards will be presented to club and flight champions at the dance for which Jennie and her band will provide music.

THEATER

THERE'S a story in the casting of Phyllis Brooks and Robert Allen to play the romantic leads in "Hard to Get." Not so long ago, before Hollywood scouts found them, this pair were commercial models in New York. The highest paid in the business. They posed as bride and groom in dozens of advertisements. . . . Amazing how many of filmland's well-known players are ex-advertising models.

Bares Methods of Crime Ring.

The clever methods employed by a special prosecutor for a grand jury in obtaining evidence against the members of a racketeering ring, are depicted in "Smashing the Rackets," Madison feature. With Chester Morris and Frances Mercer heading the cast, the story trace the activities of Morris as a determined G-man in bringing to justice relentless criminals. An added attraction on the 12:15 p. m. show Saturday will be five Mickey Mouse cartoons.

Woman Goal Kicker.

The only woman football player on a college team in the United States, and the national goal-kicking champion to boot, is Comedienne Joan Davis in "Hold That Co-ed." The famous "fall and bump" comedy star wins the big game with a sensational play, much to the surprise of the 21 players, the referee, the fans and herself. Others in the cast are John Barrymore, George Murphy, Marjorie Weaver and Jack Haley.

Cleans Up Racketeering.

Approaching the problems of gangster rule from an unusual angle, "The Saint In New York," at the Majestic, has its basis in a lawless but highly effective method of cleaning up racketeering. The film brings to the screen "The Saint," famous fiction detective character, created by Leslie Charteris. Heading the cast are Louis Hayward and Kay Sutton. A western, "Phantom Gold," with Jack Luden, completes the program.

Gold Feud In Film.

It's ranchers against gold rustlers in "Bar 20 Justice," Ritz's feature, with William Boyd in the featured role. The story follows the efforts of bandits to get control of the richest gold mine in the west and the steps taken by aroused cattlemen to rid the countryside of the new menace. Frank Morgan and Florence Rice in "Paradise for Three," is the second feature.

Baxter Menace.

Alan Baxter, featured in "Gangs of New York," plays the important role of gang leader in the film which follows the adventures of a police officer who takes the gang leader's place in an effort to clean up the rackets. Charles Bickford and Ann Dvorak head the cast. The No. 2 feature at the Park through Saturday is "What Becomes of the Children."

STOCK TRADERS UNNERVED BY FOREIGN NEWS

Reports German Troops Cross Czech Border Account for Flurry of Selling.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Uneasiness over warlike moves in Europe again unsettled security markets today and stocks dropped before a moderate inflow of offerings.

A flurry of selling came into stocks during the forenoon as unconfirmed reports circulated in financial circles German troops had crossed the Czech border.

With buyers timid, the selling brought losses of 1 to around 3 points in such shares as U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Electric Auto Lite, American Telephone, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, International Harvester, Union Carbide and Johns Manville.

Speculation in the grain pit veered toward the buying side with the increase in nervousness over European affairs. While wheat climbed, most other active commodities shifted uncertainly in a narrow range. Bonds slipped with stocks.

Combined with the darkening European picture, as it looked to Wall Street, was the disclosure of the scope of the hurricane property damage and heavy loss of life along the northeastern seaboard. How hard business and financial institutions had been hit in the stricken area was impossible to calculate. Insurance losses, it was assumed, would be substantial.

Trade reports continued to provide the financial community with some satisfaction in compensation for the European and storm damage headlines. The Weekly rail loading was the best this year, with traffic up 91,255 cars to 660,142.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE—Now It Can't Be Told. By Harold Gray

WHY, I COULD HARDLY KEEP FROM LAUGHING IN HIS FACE - HE THINKS HE CHEATED ME OUT OF THAT TREMENDOUS BUSINESS -
YEAH? YOU — ER — DIDN'T SAY ANYTHING ABOUT THAT OUTFIT BEING BAD PAY, DID YOU?
9-23-38
NATURALLY NOT - HE'LL FIND THAT OUT IN 60 TO 90 DAYS - HMM - I WONDER WHAT MADE HIM SO SURE WE WERE BIDDING ON THAT JOB -
ER — WELL PROBABLY HE FIGURED ALL THE TRUCKING COMPANIES WERE BIDDING -
I SUPPOSE SO - BUT I CAN'T UNDERSTAND HIS RUSHING IN WITHOUT CHECKING UP - WAIT'LL HE FINDS OUT HOW MUCH IT'S COST HIM — OH, BOY!
HE'LL SURE BE PLENTY SORE AT US THEN -
AT US! HOW CAN HE BLAME US? IT WAS ALL HIS IDEA — HE DIDN'T ASK HIM TO GRAB THAT PHONEY JOB -
OH, HA! HA! OF COURSE — HE SHOULDN'T BLAME US — BUT HE'LL HAVE TO BLAME

CHAPTER 1.

JUDY ROGERS' slim, browned hand was actually trembling as she dialed Craig Denby's telephone number. She looked at it in astonishment. It was ridiculous for her nerves to grow acrobatic just because she was telephoning a tall young man, with humorous blue eyes that could be very serious when he said, "I love you," and a profile that would have meant better business for Hollywood.

The hand wobbled a little more.

So Judy hung up.

She met her own reflection in the long mirror of her dressing table. No, she hadn't changed much since morning. No one, unless he looked deeply into her brown eyes, could tell that she wanted to cry. Wanted to cry dreadfully. The bob on her slender neck, curled just as it always had. Her tilted nose retained its seven freckles, donated by the summer's swimming, golfing and tennis.

Outwardly nothing about her had changed. Nothing at all! That was funny—your whole life could be upset and yet you looked the same. But inwardly . . .

She clutched the telephone again, and sank back among the flowered cushions of the chaise longue. This time her hand was steady on the dial.

She loved Craig. She had known it all summer. She had not realized how much until lately. Now she wished that she had told him so Thursday night when he had asked her, as he had been doing for so long now. Thursday night—that was four days ago—she and Craig had been dinner guests at the Bantrees, on Long Island. Late in the evening they had gone walking, along the terrace, and Craig, tall and handsome in white flannels and blue coat, had caught her hands with swift impatience.

"Judy, sweet, how many more times must I ask you to marry me before you'll say 'yes'? Or aren't you going to say it, my darling?"

She had worn a white chiffon dress whose ruffles were edged with silver, and there had been silver leaves in her black hair, silver slippers on her feet. The dress was new . . .

"The last new dress I'll have for a long, long time," she murmured now. For she would marry Craig because she loved him, but she would not let him buy her any dresses or shoes. Not even a powder puff! Not until he understood that she was coming to him because she wanted to, not because a headline in the paper had frightened her.

If only, only she had told him she loved him before!

While the telephone pealed in Craig's apartment far across the city, Judy remembered her answer to Craig on the moon-bright terrace, with a blue sea far below.

"I'm afraid, Craig. Haven't I told you before?"

"But I'll cure your fear. We'll be happy forever!"

She had been sweet and serious in the moonlight. "Forever is such a long word, Craig. And it doesn't stretch down the years. If love lasted—but it doesn't! My mother and my father were divorced when I was six! Aunt Polly's been married three times. Your own parents, too, Craig! And at boarding school there were so many of us from broken homes, we had a D. D. club—daughters of divorce. No, Craig, I'm afraid of marriage!"

"You've said all of this before, honey," Craig had reproved her. "Let's skip it. Here's the issue! Judy, do you love me?"

She did. But if she told him so, he would sweep all of her fears into the shining sea. So she hesitated, and in that moment someone joined them. Sooner or later, though, she knew she would marry Craig. Maybe love deceived you, but you couldn't hold out against it forever.

The bell was ringing loudly in Craig's apartment, but he did not answer. She waited. He must, he must be there!

As he left her Thursday night he had said: "I'm going away for the week-end, Judy. I'll be back sometime about noon Monday. At the apartment, probably. I'll give you a ring."

Well, he hadn't. So she was telephoning him.

"Hello!" That was Craig. But his voice sounded drowsy. Half asleep.

"Craig, it's Judy!"

"Judy! And what are you doing up at the crack of dawn, my sweet one?"

"It isn't the crack of dawn, young man. It's a quarter of 12. I thought you were just in from the country."

There was a pause, almost as though he wondered just how to pattern his next words.

He was speaking. "I came home late last night, Judy. Or early this morning, if you want to be literal. I threw my weary bones across the bed and forgot there was a world until the telephone rang."

She laughed. She couldn't stop. It was prompted by relief. So Craig had not read the news. He didn't know that her father was bankrupt, wiped out, penniless.

"Craig darling—I want to see you."

"A ticket for speeding again?"

"Much more serious."

"You were impudent with the cop and it didn't go?"

It was such foolish chatter. Why didn't he drop it? Why prolong the banter.

Or why couldn't she come right out and say: "Craig, I do love you. You asked me to let you know when I was ready. And my father's finances have nothing, nothing to do with that. Oh, please believe me, Craig! To prove it I won't let you give me one thing. I won't marry until I have a job. Only keep loving me."

"Judy, I have an important announcement. Listening?" Again a pause, so brief, it almost didn't happen. Then: "Honey, I was married last night."

She hadn't heard him correctly, of course.

"Oh, Craig!" She hadn't heard him correctly, of course. Or he was teasing her. Craig was going to marry her, Judy Rogers! Hadn't he been asking her for years . . . three of them, anyway? But she must answer him lightly—"With a book and a ring and a bride, Craig?" she asked, forcing her husky voice to follow a gay pattern.

"The prettiest bride you ever saw, Judy. We went to Greenwich. It was all so sudden, you see . . ."

"Yes, yes, of course." So he was married. Married to some strange person, or maybe not strange. She must find out.

"Whom did you marry, Craig? Do I know her?"

"I don't think so. I didn't either until I met her at the house party. She's Mary Banner, a southern girl, minister's daughter and all that, who's been doing bits on the radio.

A moment before the wire that carried Judy's voice to Craig had been a shining, vibrant cord that drew them close. Now he was—somebody else's husband.

Because she had to breathe deeply before she could answer him, the man spoke quickly, concern in his deep tones.

"Judy, are you all right?"

"Of course, nut. It was a shock, that's all. When your favorite beau comes back from a week-end with a charming bride, you silly goof, a girl has a right to a few gasps. Here I was depending on your devotion until I was a nice old lady—"

He laughed, and she knew that he did not suspect that a crack was beginning in her heart, growing wider and wider, just as a crevice started in the earth when there was to be a crater.

"Judy, you were right about everything. If you had ever intended to agree to my repeated request, you would have done it right off the bat. You had more sense than I had. Some day you'll meet a better guy who'll knock your fears into a jelly bean."

"I could make you a bet on it, Craig, but I'd win hands down," she heard her voice answering. Marry? Not ever! Craig was gone, and with him her last belief that maybe, just maybe, love could last. But she must talk. "But I haven't congratulated you at all. I do, with all my heart. Tell Mary Banner she has my favorite choice of a husband, if I wanted one, and I want to see her soon."

"You will. She went back to her own apartment last night to pack up. We're taking a short cruise, leaving this evening. We'll see you when we get back, Judy."

She hung up. The long room had not changed. Only she, Judy Rogers, was different. Craig was gone. The pain she experienced was so real, so cold, she jumped up and began to change her dress quickly.

Her father's money was gone, too. That thought gave her an idea. She picked up the telephone again and dialed another number.

She asked for her father's attorney.

"Is it important, Miss Rogers?" the man's secretary asked, and she discerned the pity that threaded the girl's tones. Pity, and yet secret joy that Judy Rogers, the most popular debutante of her season, three years before, had slipped from the pedestal with the going of her father's fortune.

ALLIANCE HAS RECORD IN FEW TRAFFIC DEATHS

None Since August, 1937, Has Had Only 18 Fatalities in Nine Years.

(By Associated Press)

ALLIANCE—While other cities fume about traffic fatalities and launch crusades of an often-sporadic nature, this northeastern Ohio town continues quietly to maintain a record that includes no automobile deaths since Aug. 21, 1937, and only 18 in nine years.

In the 11 years since Police Chief Harry Stark assumed office, there have been but 30 deaths on the streets.

There were six deaths each in 1928 and 1929, one in 1930, three in 1931, and none at all in 1932. Two died in both 1933 and 1934, three in both 1935 and 1936, and four last year. Five of the fatalities resulted when automobiles hit trains, and four were children run down on private property.

Reasons for Record.

What has brought about this safety record? Stark attributes it to adherence to the following six-plank platform:

Thorough investigation of every accident, with insistence on prosecution if carelessness is the cause;

Invitation to residents to complain freely of reckless driving, with prompt police inquiry following;

A publicity campaign that includes warnings to parents and explanations of motoring dangers to drivers;

Operation of an active schoolboy patrol;

Traffic lights with a "doubled-red," which Stark believes superior to the conventional type;

And assignment of motorcycle officers to all school zones.

Year-round and eternally strict enforcement of every traffic law is the ultimate "sure cure" for accidents, however, Chief Stark holds.

"The deaths in Alliance have not been the result of speed," he commented in bolstering his contention, "for the motorists long ago learned that reckless driving would mean arrest. Enforcement is constant rather than by spurts. When there is evidence of lawless driving, the guilty party should be arrested to set an example to others."

In addition to the decline in deaths, the chief pointed out that non-fatal accidents also had greatly diminished. In the month of August, seven persons suffered minor injuries in three accidents—and police made three arrests as a result.

PERIL GROWS AS TOLL NEARS 500

Rivers Rise in Six States Where Hurricane Blazed Trail of Death.

as did this one, and scourged Florida with a loss of 2,000 lives.

In the afflicted states, a hundred years' history could not produce a catastrophe of equal extent. Even today, nearly 48 hours after wind and wave struck with paralyzing force, a coherent story of loss and damage could not be assembled.

Gov. Wilbur Cross of Connecticut termed the disaster "the worst in the history of the state"—a history dating back to the birth of the nation. Parallel statements came from Rhode Island, hardest hit of all, and Massachusetts. But nowhere would anyone hazard even a guess of the loss and the number of missing.

Near Disaster Stage.

Even as rescue workers rallied under the impetus of direct orders from President Roosevelt that threw all government agencies into the fight against the post-hurricane menaces of famine and disease, rivers in New England, New York and New Jersey inched toward the devastating peak of the 1936 floods.

The flood threat was particularly acute in Hartford, Conn. With 10 per cent of the city's 1,200 acres already under water, the Connecticut river surged past 33 feet—17 feet above flood stage—while 1,000 hip-booted men desperately heaped sandbags atop threatened dykes.

At that height, the river was three feet below the crest of the 1936 flood which caused a $20,000,000 loss in the city of 175,000.

Other flood danger spots lay along the Merrimack river in New Hampshire and on the Connecticut's course through Massachusetts. In New York the Hudson, Susquehanna, Chenango and Mohawk were crawling upward toward menacing proportions, as was the Delaware, along the Pennsylvania-New Jersey border.

Rescue workers began the sorry jobs of salvage and succor in the territory battered by the hurricane's wind and waves. They faced their greatest task in Rhode Island. The smallest state in the union contributed the largest death list—it stood at 229 today—and even that appalling figure was not complete.

"Only scraping the surface" was the dismal message that accompanied the report of the finding of 18 bodies at Island park. "Fifty or more" dead was the estimate of the coast guard for the Watch Hill shore secton. Scores of towns had not been heard from since the hurricane struck.

Throughout the storm area, towns still lacked light and power. Food generally was reported adequate but the boiling of drinking water was urged in precaution against disease. Isolated towns used the radio to call for help: Gilbertville, Mass., where 1,000 persons were isolated, sent out carrier pigeons with a plea for food.

And, while the pigeons winged away, three food-laden trucks stood a few miles distant, their paths blocked by washed-out and flooded roads. Arrangements were made to send food by plane today.

The Red Cross and government agencies were in the van of rescue work. The WPA had 100,000 employes on emergency work on an "around the clock" basis.

The coast guard marshaled 15 seagoing ships, three seaplanes, three mobile radio stations and about 100 small boats in the devastated area.

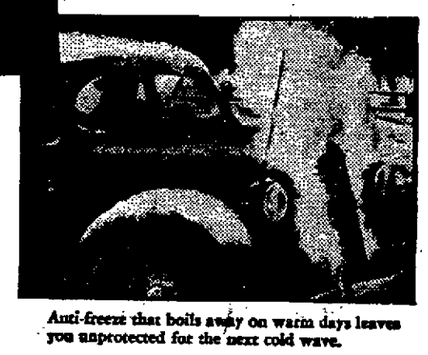
...let others BOIL!



Anti-freeze that boils away on warm days leaves you unprotected for the next cold wave.

Loss of radiator solution causes freezing, stops circulation. This in turn causes overheating which costs motorists millions every year.

Get out of the "Worry Class" this winter. Once you put in "Prestone" anti-freeze, there's NO MORE GUESSING!

WHEN you buy "Eveready" "Prestone" anti-freeze, you buy all winter protection for your car. "Prestone" anti-freeze is more than just anti-freeze.

Most any other kind of anti-freeze will guard against freezing . . . until it boils away. But "Prestone" anti-freeze protects your car against engine heat . . . the thief that steals volatile anti-freeze.

Have fun this winter. Cut driving worries. Protect your family, as well as yourself, from freeze-up caused by boil-away. Smile with "Prestone" anti-freeze . . . let others boil!

YEAR AFTER YEAR, more and more "Prestone" anti-freeze has been made and sold, yet demand has outrun production. This winter, we expect there will be enough for everyone, for early in the year tremendous new production facilities went into full-time operation. Still, to be sure, get yours EARLY!

DAVEY URGED 'TO BE A MAN!'

Secretary Kennedy Tears Into 'Reign of Terror' in Plea at Dem Convention.

command and with all the emphasis of my soul . . . in the name of Almighty God, Martin L. Davey, be a man!"

Thunderous applause greeted Kennedy's dramatic utterances and an ovation followed his conclusion. But immediately afterwards began the heated discussion as to the political merits of Kennedy's move.

Some leaders, declining to permit use of their names, were openly hostile, contending Kennedy had widened the breach in Democratic ranks. Others inclined to view that the secretary had brought into the open an issue that might otherwise dog the party throughout the fall campaign.

National Democratic Chairman James A. Farley declined comment. His address pleaded for unity, asserting however that "revenge or personal bitterness has no place in politics."

"Defeat is seldom sweet for anybody," the postmaster general asserted, "x x x I feel sure that the Democrats of Ohio, regardless of past likes or dislikes, will conduct themselves with that thought in mind."

While Kennedy provided the sensation last night, the unexpected appearance of U. S. Sen. Vic Donahey highlighted yesterday afternoon's meeting. He appeared on the platform late and was greeted by a thunderous ovation.

After a brief speech in which he pledged support of the ticket "from the top to the bottom," the senator handed to Sawyer a letter that read, in part:

"Rarely does any part of the state ticket rise above its head. Therefore, those who would withhold support from the head of the ticket will imperil the entire ticket. I counsel harmony and a united front for you for governor.

"You have a splendid business record and can restore order and much-needed economies in administration of the government of Ohio."

Earlier, Sawyer said in his keynote address on state issues that he had "not altered by one inch my determination to fulfil" primary pledges which included a promse to "clean up the state government."

Farley told the convention that a charge by the Republicans that President Roosevelt was seeking to become a dictator was "the biggest overstuffed straw man ever injected into a national political campaign."

HITLER'S REPLY SENT PREMIER

Europe Tense as Chamberlain Gets Answer to Letter on Delaying Negotiations.

Hitler was inclined to grant concessions.

The following communique was issued at Chamberlain's hotel:

"The Prime Mimister has sent a letter to the German chancellor this morning to which it is understood Herr Hitler is replying. The meeting which was to have been held this morning has consequently been postponed until later in the day."

Even before the consultation was postponed, there were clear indications that the British Prime Minister's attitude toward Hitler s demands for the partition of Czechoslovakia had stiffened.

The blunt assertion that Hitler might refuse to guarantee the integrity of rebuilt Czechoslovakia unless Poland and Hungary also get minority favors was made today.

Chamberlain's letter to Hitler came when there were reports of new and heavy German troop concentrations near the Czechoslovak frontier.

For that reason, it was assumed by many here, the British premier sought definite assurances from Hitler that the German troops would not move eastward.

BISHOP LAUDS MISSION GROUP

Toledo Prelate Pays Tribute to Society's Progress in Sermon at Dedication.

Commending the steady progress of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart since the establishment of their house of studies near Shelby in 1934, Bishop Karl J. Alter of Toledo, yesterday dedicated an addition to the Sacred Heart Seminary on route 39 northwest of Mansfield.

The addition, completed recently, was dedicated before 60 visiting monsignori and priests from all the Catholic dioceses in Ohio and a number in Pennsylvania, Illinois and Wisconsin.

In a brief sermon, Bishop Alter said: "It is our hope that this institution will continue to flourish and soon begin to send forth priests to preach the gospel of Christ and to carry the glad tidings of His Saving Grace to far corners of the world.

The bishop celebrated mass in the seminary chapel and conferred minor orders upon the first three students of the institution to be advanced to the clerical state.

Assisting the bishop at the ceremonies were the following: Very Rev. Joseph Averbeck, M. S. C., Geneva, Ill.; Father Commissary of the society's American district, and Very Rev. Joseph Janssen, M. S. C., superior of the seminary, who acted as chaplain of the bishop, Rt. Rev. Msgr. R. C. Goebel, pastor of St. Peter's church, Mansfield, and Rev. Michael A. McFadden, pastor of the Church of the Most Pure Heart of Mary, Shelby, who were deacons of honor; Rev. Carl H. Reineck, in charge of the Home and Foreign Missions office, Toledo, and Rev. B Greifenberg, M. S. C., Sacred Hear' Monastery, Aurora, Ill., who were deacon and subdeacon;, respectively; and Rev. Leo F. Griffin, secretary to Bishop Alter, who was master of ceremonies. Seminarians, lay-brothers, and a group of boys from the parochial school filled the minor offices.

YOUTHS HELD IN THEFTS FREED

Judge Sends Boys Home 4th Time After They Admit Series of Robberies.

Two Mansfield youths who have been involved in at least 20 thefts over a three-year period, were warned by Judge C. J. Anderson in juvenile court yesterday and sent home to their parents.

The youths, 14 and 15 years old, had been in court on three previous occasions on charges of theft or loitering. Each time they were sent home and ordered to report to Ralph Carroll, probation officer.

Carroll said the cases were continued this time pending further reports of misconduct.

One youth pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing four cartons of cigarets from the American Grocery company. The other was cited on a loitering charge.

Police arrested the pair Wednesday night on North Main street. One of the boys admitted he had been involved in the theft of a case of beer from the National Ice company, a large canvas from the state highway garage, a case of soft drinks from the Coca Cola Bottling works, candy from the Central Fruit and Grocery company and numerous small articles from homes and freight cars.

At previous hearings in juvenile court, the boys confessed to similar robberies over a period beginning in 1935.

COURT ORDER DISBARS BELL

Decree Charges Attorney Has Failed 'to Account for Clients' Money.'

charges would be filed against Bell, since none of the clients involved wished to bring such action.

The court entry, signed by Judge C. H. Huston, said Bell had admitted being "guilty of misconduct in office involving moral turpitude." Charges were heard by Judge Huston behind closed doors at the courthouse. Bell attended the hearing.

Charges were drawn up by a committee appointed by Judge Huston after complaints had reached the bar association. Members of the committee are Marriott, Henry P. Huston, J. V. Will, and Francis R. O'Brien, all members of the county bar association.

The entry stated specifically that Bell "has failed to discharge obligations imposed upon him by his office in completing the work placed in his hands, and has failed, neglected and refused to report the progres of said work and in instances, failed, neglected and refused to complete work to the detriment of his clients."

The prosecutor said "a large sum" had been lost by a Mansfield firm through misappropriation of funds, but the committee had agreed not to reveal the identity of the firm, which planned no further action against Bell, he said. A number of individuals also had been victimized, Mariott added.

GRAFT CLEAN-UP KEY PLANK IN DEM PLATFORM

State Convention Ignores Repercussions From Davey, by Adopting Program.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—In complete disregard of the effect it may have upon Gov. Martin L. Davey's future relations with his party, the Democratic state convention today approved a campaign platform condemning "all graft, legal or otherwise" in state government.

Backing up the demands of the new gubernatorial candidate, Charles Sawyer, the party's biennial convention accepted as the key plank a clause couched almost exactly in words Sawyer used against the Davey administration in the primary.

"We promise to drive every chiseller and shakedown artist out of the statehouse," the platform declared. "And we pledge ourselves to seek legislation to eliminate all graft, whether so-called legal graft or otherwise."

Calls For Close Check.

Taking cognizance of charges of alleged abuses in conduct of the state business, the platform pledged establishment of a central state accounting system, periodical finance reports from the heads of state departments, and "strict compliance with the principles of competitive open bidding in the letting of state contracts."

On another sore point with the party, that of civil service, the platform spoke out without qualification, giving "absolute guarantee that the civil service be free of assessments and all other forms of political coercion."

The unequivocal stand on such issues was taken in the face of Governor Davey's refusal to attend the convention and reports he had ordered his supporters to "boycott" the meeting. It followed the demand of Secretary of State William J. Kennedy for the governor to "be a man."

"We pledge the Democratic party in Ohio to the doctrines of good government," the platform said. "With the help of all right thinking citizens, we will make Ohio the best governed state in the union."

This expression in the platform was secondary only to a reaffirmation of pledged support for President Roosevelt nationally.

The party document pledged organization of the liquor department "in line with the highest principles of honesty, efficiency and economy," proposed strict supervision of contract letting in the highway department and control of the department by a bi-partisan commission.

An indirect stab was taken at the proposed constitutional amendment for appointment of supreme and appellate judges.

Other major planks included:

Taxation—An immediate survey of tax needs and tax sources with a view to making reductions wherever possible in the tax burden; revision and recodification of tax laws.

Labor—State law for a 5-day, 40-hour week on public construction; assurance of hearings before court injunctions against strikers during labor disputes; strict enforcement of the women and minors' minimum wage law; extension of principles of industrial democracy, including the right to collective bargaining.

Promise U. S. Co-operation.

Old Age Pensions—Complete co-operation between the state and federal government in handling of pension affairs; "absolute guarantees that the administration" of the pension law "shall be kept forever free of political manipulation," study of proposals for a non-partisan administrative board.

Unemployment Insurance—Freedom from political influence in administration of job insurance when benefit payments start next January, employment of trained, competent personnel.

Relief—Prompt action toward a long-range relief program and promotion of long-term construction projects wherever possible.

Welfare — Establishment of bureau of criminal classification; efforts to relieve overcrowding in state institutions; expansion of services of the bureau of juvenile research; study of employment conditions in state institutions for a possible increase in standards of wages, hours and living conditions for institutional employes.

Conservation—Retention of the conservation division within the agriculture department, but a recommendation for appointment of the conservation commissioner by the conservation council to remove the office from political influence; development of a "national park area" in Ohio; water, soil and game conservation; correlation of conservation and recreational aims.

Education—Establishment of a pay-as-you-go basis for the public school foundation system; relief of local school districts of interest payments on foundation deficit notes.

Agriculture — Consultation with "practical farmers" on farm problems; development of co-operative marketing facilities, increased facilities for the state fair; continued efforts to control livestock diseases.

Public utilities—Elimination of red tape in rate fixing cases; strict impartiality in hearings before the utilities commission.

Equal rights—Support for a federal anti-lynching bill; opening of responsible public positions to all persons irrespective of race and color.

Ohio coal—Promises to put the Ohio coal mining industry "on its feet" and supporting legislation compelling state institutions to burn Ohio mined coal when compatible with economical administrative standards.

Miscellaneous—Maintenance of state health department on a merit basis and extension of public health facilities; encouragement for women's increased participation in governmental affairs; continued efforts to aid youth in finding jobs, vocational guidance, and consultation with interested groups regarding a possible state youth act to co-operate with the national youth administration; promotion and extension of facilities now available in the state capital for handling of veterans' affairs.

FIREMEN PUT OUT BLAZE, THEN GET STUCK IN MUD ON STREET

Firemen were delayed for more than an hour this morning when apparatus got stuck in a mud hole on Brickman avenue, after they had extinguished a garage blaze at the home of J. F. O'Donnell, 714 West Third street.

The fire, which destroyed the garage and an automobile, started, according to Fire Chief Charles J. Seeburger, from live coals being placed in an ash barrel. Damage was estimated at $2,000.

Firemen from company No. 1 under the direction of the chief battled the blaze, fanned by the car's exploding gasoline tank, for more than an hour. For a time it threatened the house, only 10 feet away.

The alarm was turned in at 3:20 a. m. by a neighbor who was awakened by the reflection of the blaze. By the time firemen arrived the entire building was enveloped in flames. Seeburger said more than 300 feet of hose was laid and water played on the house to save it.

He said today he had learned that a colored man who had done odd jobs about the house, yesterday had removed ashes from the furnace and deposited them in the wooden barrel in the garage.

On leaving the scene, Seeburger said, the apparatus got stuck in a mud hole on Brickman avenue and after efforts of another piece of the equipment to pull the machine out had failed, a wrecker was called from a downtown garage to do the job.

PLANE CRASHES

Craft Explodes, Falls Into Woods Near Hudson, N. Y.

HUDSON, N. Y.—(INS)—An unidentified plane believed to be an army craft, exploded over this city today and crashed in wooded land a mile and a half to the south.

The pilot, unconscious, was found near the railroad tracks. He was taken to the Hudson hospital, where his condition is reported to be critical.

and parade. The Czechs said, in effect that the legions would be met by Czech soldiers ready to shoot.

Meantime, the Sudeten German committee of five — established here since the Henlein party ceased to exist officially—issued this proclamation:

"We must keep cool. Only in that way can bloodshed be avoided. We must not count on immediate coming of the reich troops. The Czech soldiers, tanks and artillery must not be used against us. Czech commanders will not use them if we maintain order."

Clash Averted on German Border.

ASCH, Czechoslovakia—(AP)—A threatened clash between a Sudeten German armed force and Czechoslovak soldiers was averted today when government troops halted their advance toward the Asch area, in Sudetenland, near the German border.

The Czechoslovak troops withdrew one mile to the east off the main highway to Tirschnitz from lines they had occupied at Oberlomma, just outside the resort town of Franzensbad. They left road patrols behind, however.

The Sudeten Germans remained behind barricades on the main highway between Eger and Asch which they had been prepared to defend to prevent the Czechoslovaks from reoccupying Asch, hometown of Konrad Henlein, Sudeten German party leader.

The Czechoslovak troops had left Asch when the republic's surrender to the British-French partition plan was announced Wednesday.

The critical situation developed overnight when the Czech army reversed its evacuation, hitherto bloodless, and started reoccupying the Sudetenland.

The new government under a soldier-premier at Prague was held responsible here for the sudden change in the entire situation.

Poles Open Agencies To Recruit Troops.

WARSAW—(AP)—Recruiting offices for a Polish "free corps"—similar to the Sudeten-German "free corps"—were opened here today by the Union of Silesian insurgents who demand that Poland annex the Polish-inhabited Teschen region of Czechoslovakia.

Other recruiting offices were opened in the Polish Teschen area, just across the border from Czechoslovakia. Numerous Polish refugess from Czechoslovakia have gone there.

French General Quits, Renounces His Country.

PRAGUE — (INS) — General Faucher, chief of the French military mission which developed Czechoslovakia's modern army, today tendered his resignation to the French government, asking to be relieved of his duties.

He placed his services at the immediate disposal of the Czech defense forces.

The Exchange Telegraph stated in a Prague dispatch today that Faucher, appearing before President Eduard Benes in the presence of the French minister, said:

"Sir, I am ashamed of being a Frenchman. I shall never return to my native country."

Map Program In Event of Invasion.

BUDAPEST —(AP)— Hungarian and Yugoslav diplomats were disclosed today to be negotiating over possible action of the two countries should the German army march into Czechoslovakia's Sudetenland.

A Yugoslav foreign office official said one of the main questions was whether Hungary should attempt to occupy southern Czechoslovakia in the event of a German army advance.

Young Rainey died 10 minutes after the heavy charge shattered his chest as he and a companion were hunting on Indian lake. The accident occurred as the youth was about to enter a rowboat. Coroner H. L. Mikesell of West Liberty gave a verdict of accidental death.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1938.

Hitler seems to have other ideas about "How to Make Friends and Influence People."

Why not award the American league pennant to the team in second place—where there's some competition?

Just as a nation decides that it has learned the lesson of one economic disaster, it generally plunges into another quite different.

Townships Move to Ban Liquor.

WHETHER Ohio will continue to move toward return of prohibition, or proceed to "clean house" in such a way as to make the legalized liquor business tolerable, cannot yet be predicted.

The present trend is toward eventual statewide prohibition, due to disgust over the way the retail liquor business is being conducted under loose policies of the state liquor board in issuing licenses in disregard of population quotas and character of licensees.

As matters now stand, 885 of the 1,340 townships in Ohio already have some form of prohibition and additional elections on this issue are scheduled for 30 counties this fall.

Most obvious error in restoring the sale of intoxicants in Ohio possibly had to do with legislative acceptance of the fallacy that beer is non-intoxicating, which resulted in beer places being licensed in all parts of cities and in rural districts, with many of them used as a cloak for the sale of hard liquor.

Issuing of sale-by-the-glass liquor licenses to night-spots outside of cities and in the vicinity of villages throughout the county, with 2:30 a. m. as closing time, was also an objectionable phase of the restored liquor business which could not fail to arouse resentment in sections disturbed by the rowdyism common to such places.

Extent to which intoxicants play a part in traffic accidents and fatalities; lax enforcement of liquor laws; licensing of beer parlors near schools and churches; permitting dancing and questionable forms of entertainment at night clubs; sale of liquor to minors—all of these things contribute to growing public belief that worse conditions now exist in the liquor business in Ohio than were associated with regulated saloons prior to the prohibition era.

Springfield and Cass townships, and the village of Shiloh, in Richland county, are to ballot in November on the issue of banning beer and liquor. Worthington, Bloominggrove and Franklin townships permit only the sale of 3.2 beer.

If it is the sound judgment of a majority of the people of Ohio that a well-regulated liquor business is preferable to prohibition it is none too soon for the state legislature and public officials to be moving toward a clean-up of present intolerable conditions.

Too Much Idle Money.

APPARENTLY the interest rate on public loans reached the lowest ebb point in American history with the recent government financing by Secretary Morgenthau. The rate on $1,300,000,000 of discounted bills is said to figure out at one-twentieth of 1 per cent, or less than one- one-hundredth of the rate private citizens usually have to pay for their loans. There are reasons, of course, for the incredibly low rate enjoyed by the government. The chief reason is that banks and lending agencies in general are bulging with idle money, or with idle credit which they can use for money, and they want to keep it employed even if it isn't paying for its keep. All the more wonder then, that productive uses are not found for billions of such funds.

"There is no demand for it," lenders say. But wouldn't there be a demand if rates were lowered, as the prices of excess goods are lowered to stimulate buying?

Reading Matter for Young People.

READING is becoming more and more a matter of individual selection. With all of the books and magazines now on the market, and with fast presses turning out more all the time, the average person can do little more than read a daily newspaper, several favorite magazines, and as many good books as can be crowded into leisure time.

Adults have ordinarily formed reading habits which work out to their own satisfaction—with a number of appealing books set aside for future reading, "when there is more time."

For young people, however, more particularly around high school age, choice of good reading has not been a simple matter and considerable difficulty is sometimes encountered in separating the wheat from the chaff.

Which makes interesting the fact that a new monthly magazine, "Youth Today," is designed to fill this particular purpose. As an illustrated monthly digest of good reading for young people, this magazine covers a vast field of youth interests in factual and inspirational articles and also provides a class of fiction which young people will enjoy.

Another feature of interest is selection of a boy and girl of the month, for some outstanding achievement. A look through the initial issue justifies belief that "Youth Today" deserves a place among magazines in homes in which there are young people.

All Traffic Rules Are Important.

THERE are no "minor" traffic rules. The slightest violation of the traffic safety code may result in an accident.

The border line reckless driver is nearly as great a traffic menace as the speed fiend and drunken driver. Border line drivers, says a traffic authority, are those guilty of offenses mistakenly called "minor." They pull out from the curb into traffic without looking for other cars. They turn around suddenly in the middle of the street. They cheat at traffic lights, by starting a shade too soon or not stopping promptly. They neglect signals to other drivers.

Often they get away with these tricks simply because other drivers are alert and act quickly to avoid collision. Often, on the other hand, they cause accidents in which innocent and careful drivers are hurt or their cars damaged.

Traffic authorities do well to get after these selfish and indifferent motorists as part of a thorough safety campaign.

Cheer up, it's hardly likely that Winchell will even hear of it.

Watching Trends

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — The pathetic thing about this Czechoslovakia business is that if the Nazis move in on Sudeten Germany it won't solve the difficulty or end the trouble.

That is the estimate of competent authorities on European affairs here, and is the view of historians, too.

For more than a thousand years the Sudeten mountains have been the barrier separating eastward moving Germans and westward moving Slavs. At that point the two races have ground together like huge millstones, fighting, trading, marrying and fighting again. Most Czechs have a touch of Teutonic blood and most Sudeten Germans a trace of Slav.

This ring of mountains separates Germany and Austria from that end of Czechoslovakia which juts deeply into Germany like a thick peninsula. Like the rugged Pyrenees between France and Spain, the Sudeten mountains form one of the few natural barriers between national groups. What Herr Hitler seems disposed to do is to detach from Czechoslvakia a narrow strip of the mountain slope on the Bohemian side of the range, across the divide from Germany.

No Solution In Separation.

R. W. SETON-WATSON, writing in the current issue of "Foreign Affairs," says: "The detachment of these (mountains) from Czechoslovakia would have left unsolved the two main difficulties: that the major part of the land inside the present boundaries is inseparably bound by geographical and economic ties with central Bohemia, and that no human ingenuity has hitherto availed to draw a possible ethnographic line between German and Czech."

Seton-Watson's article is pro-Czech, but his view on this is shared widely here.

The highly industrialized Sudeten region has had its principal outlet into the Bohemian region into which the Sudeten mountain valleys drain. In times past this same region has traded actively with Germany, across the mountains. It has enjoyed a flood of tourist traffic from Germany to the once popular Bohemian resorts.

The combination of the 1929 depression and adoption of the German ecnomic policy shriveled German-Czechoslovak trade to a fourth of its earlier level. The tourist travel dropped to nothing when Germans were prohibited from taking any holiday money across the border. The German section of Bohemia—the troubled Sudeten region—was harder hit, as a result, than the Czech.

The Economic Angle.

THIS adds a new angle to the proposed merger. Sudeten Germans feel they would do better economically if blanketed into the German economic system than by being shut out of it. The economic question in this case is considered as important as the racial, although far less useful to Hitler in dramatizing the issue.

But the problem of minorities would not be solved. In the Sudeten section, along with the 3,500,000 Germans, are 400,000 Czechs who would be forced willy nilly under the German arm. In turn, 700,000 Germans would be left in that part of Bohemia which is predominately Czech.

Of course nobody here, or presumably in Europe, is fooled into believing that Hitler's sympathy for the Sudeten Germans is his only reason for wanting to move in. If one is to believe his autobiography, he wants the raw material resources of Czechoslovakia, as well as the readier access this conquest would give him to the rich farming sections of Hungary, the oil fields of Rumania, and the outlet to the east.

Strangely enough, in the same current issue of "Foreign Affairs" is an article by Herbert Feis, state department adviser on international economic affairs, desperately arguing that restoration of sensible trade would remove the need of a nation to get raw materials by conquest. But he doesn't seem overly hopeful that Hitler will be moved by it.

2. Yes.

3. The northern part of Lake of the Woods county in Minnesota is farther north than any other state in the union.

As Others See It

Does Seem Odd.

Hull Sets Example of Responsibility

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Secretary of State Cordell Hull has been the hardest worked official in Washington since the European situation became so threatening. His whole department has been toiling overtime, but of course its chief has been kept most continously upon the qui vive of all. Secretary Hull isn't so constituted as to take things easy, anyway. He has an acute sense of responsibility. If ever a cabinet premier's duties kept him awake nights it's true of Cordell Hull.

HULL

Several months ago I had a personal chat with this Tennesseean, whom I know quite well. In fact, when he was in the senate, I once asked him for an interview (concerning tariffs), which he said he momentarily was too busy to grant. "But," he added, "you know my ideas. Write the story yourself. I'll indorse it." I considered this quite a compliment, coming from such a statesman as the then Senator Hull.

But the little informal talk I previously mentioned?

The Tennesseean already was secretary of state then. It was not at a particularly exciting juncture. Yet, even in the fact of normal conditions, he remarked, a state secretary has to conserve his energies to avoid breaking down his health.

ALWAYS ON CALL

He hasn't been in a position to conserve his energies of late.

I, unimportant as my functions are, am upset at being called from my bed in the morning's small hours by an inconsequential telephone call. How must it joggle a secretary of state, then, to be routed from his covers at 1 or 2 a. m. by the tinkle of a bell from London, Paris, Berlin or Prague for a discussion of issues involving world peace or war?

Id think the anticipation would keep him from GETTING to sleep, let alone waking him up subsequently.

There are temperaments which can stand everlasting tension.

I think President Roosevelt likes it. Apparently Herr Hitler and Signor Mussolini do. Premiers Chamberlain of Britain and Daladier of France, no. Tension has to be jammed down their throats. Ditto President Benes of Czechoslovakia.

As to Secretary Hull, it wears on his nerves.

Cordell Hull ought to be president of the United States.

If he'd been Democratically nominated he probably would have been beaten. Politicians knew that and didn't nominate him. His geography was wrong.

He's a liberal but not cuckoo. He's conservative but no reactionary.

This country calls itself democratic (with a small "d") and he's that kind of a democrat.

He's so good a man that the Roosevelt administration simply HAD to have him as secretary of state, for "window dressing" purposes—though he's no New Dealer. Later, the New Deal DID try to force him to resign—but he was too formidable to be "liquidated."

AN OUTSTANDING FIGURE

In this European muss he is the outstanding American figure.

He never will be president.

He's too old. His time has past. He told me so once. A Tennessee candidate, he said, was too far south to be presidentially nominated.

A southerner may be democratically nominated later—but Hull is nearly 70, which is supposed to be superannuated presidentially.

Anyway, he's in a class with Premiers Chamberlain and Daladier, Fuehrer Hitler, Duce Mussolini, President Benes, Chiang Kai Shek and the Mikado, Gen. Franco of Spain and the Spanish loyalists.

It keeps him worrying.

He might as well have been president.

Health Advice

How Respiration Functions.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

OXYGEN is the great energizer of the world. We live in a sea of air and we use it every second. Perhaps the most astonishing adaption of nature is that we exchange chemicals in the air with the plants. The plants can't get along without carbon dioxide, which is pure waste to us, while we can't get along without oxygen, which is pure waste to the plants.

Respiration as a function of the body is not so simple as it appears. It requires the co-ordinated participation of muscles, lungs, blood, the central nervous system and tissue fluids.

Air goes into the lungs and there comes in contact with the blood cells in the capillaries. Or almost in contact, being separated only by the thin wall of the lung alveolus. The pressure of oxygen inside the alveolus is 100 mm, while that of the venous blood is 40 mm, so the oxygen enters into loose combination with the hemoglobin of the blood. This constitutes external respiration.

Then an even more wonderful mechanism occurs when the blood is carried out to the tissues. The value of the hemoglobin or iron pigment of the blood, from a physiological standard, is that its affinity for oxygen is so nicely balanced that in the lungs it becomes 95 per cent saturated, and in the tissues and capillaries can give up as much oxygen as is needed.

Here, again, this process goes on automatically. We breathe just as much as we have to—slowly when sitting still, more rapidly when moving around, with painful frequency when we run a race.

These adjustments are carried out by a very delicate mechanism in the base of the brain called the respiratory center. This center was supposed formerly to occupy a very small amount of space, but studies in our own day indicate it is more diffuse and multiple. At any rate, it is very sensitive to the presence of oxygen and carbon dioxide in the blood. If the oxygen content falls, the center is stimulated to activity, so that the breathing is accentuated and more oxygen is taken in. If the oxygen in the blood is high, on the contrary, the center feels no necessity for rapid breathing and respiration falls to a low level.

Thus we have a paradoxical situation so that if an anesthetist wants to restore a patient to better breathing, he gives carbon dioxide which is a kind of body poison. When enough of this accumulates, the respiratory center is stimulated and the lungs themselves wash all the extra carbon dioxide out and take the oxygen in.

The respiratory center is sensitive to many other influences, however, and is well adapted to regulating this most essential function.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.—Daniel 3:25.

A Farmer's Diary

The Hornets' Nest.

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

IN an apple orchard, I saw a hornets' nest hanging by what seemed a thread from a branch of a large old tree. It was only a paper shell, but in its day it had been a busy home for myriads of tiny creatures.

It brought me memories. When I was just a curious, mischief-loving lad, I threw a hard green apple at the pointed base of such a dangling oval, and tore it loose. Hardly had the missile landed, until two stinging demons hit me on the forehead, just above each eye. There they perched and clung, stinging me several times before I could pick them off. A foul, repellant odor emanated from the furious insects. They did not follow me, literally, to take it on the chin. Instead, I had two black and swollen eyes. But even in the hot, smarting torture of my face, I admired the very adequate defense of their home, and the accuracy with which they judged the point from which the danger started. Hornets have had my respect, ever since.

I have watched them from a safe distance, many times. I have seen them cover a stalk of grass with paper of their own making and layer by layer, add the outer cells of their house, which starts no larger than my little finger, and grows with the increase of the colony. Then, as the season wanes, the natural round of life is completed. The nurses become languid, and forsake their duty of feeding the new-hatched grubs. Instead, they drop them in a heap below the nest. The pile of corpses grows. After the grubs are gone, the workers follow. One by one, they die and are thrown out. Finally only the queen is left, and she deserts the home and hides herself away for the winter.

Within the shell, worms breed, and eat the whole interior from the fragile home, until all that remains is such a battered, broken shell as I saw today, swinging beneath the branch. Food for worms . . . it is the final fate of every living creature.

And yet, I know that, hidden in some protected spot, the queen is safe, waiting till "spring comes tripping north again."

Listen, World!

Love Didn't Pass You By.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

SO YOU think love has passed you by? Cheated you . . . deserted you . . . broken your heart? And you're sick with bitterness and loneliness?

Don't be a fool! Love doesn't pass people by—if they really want it. Love CAN'T pass by people who really want it . . . really feel it . . .

For love isn't something that comes—or goes.

Love is something you have in your own heart . . . something you make and live and give. And anyone who is willing to live and give love, always has it, nothing can take it away from them. Not indifference. Or bad luck. Or desertion. Or death. Love is always there for those who will have it.

I'm sick of hearing Old Maids whine about the love which never came their way.

I'm sick of hearing Wives and Mothers wail about the love they've lost.

Hitherto, I've tried to mind my manners with such people. And be sorry for them. Well, I am sorry for them. But I'm not sorry for them in the way they want me to be, and I intend to tell them so. Just for once, I'm going to tell them the truth about love—and about what ails them.

LISTEN, YOU OLD MAIDS!

You resigned or resentful women, drifting along through meaningless, empty lives. You women with your pitiful, exasperating alibis and pretenses, your ghastly, obvious hunger. Why did you get this way? Here's why you got that way!

You say Love skipped you. But Love didn't skip you—you skipped Love. You were afraid of Love. You were afraid of its cost and its complications. You wanted to have your cake and eat it, too. You wanted a man around to prove you could have a man around. But you didn't want a man around to love, or follow, or serve or endure.

You didn't want male ashes or male tempers or male coarseness or male guffaws at your pussyfooting ways. You wanted a man—ferociously. But you didn't want a man—maternally. You weren't willing to be a warm, tolerant mother to a man . . . or a gay, careless companion to a man. You wanted a man to boss . . . or exhibit . . . or admire you . . . or run your errands.

BUT YOU DIDN'T WANT TO BE USED YOURSELF. AND MEN FEEL THOSE THINGS . . . AND BEAT IT WHILE THE BEATING'S GOOD.

LISTEN, YOU ANGRY WIVES!

You abused and revengeful women, everlastingly relating your tale of sorrow. If you had used one hundredth part the time and energy and imagination working to make a man happy as you do in getting hunk you wouldn't have any tale of sorrow to relate. Yes, I know that some men are Bad Numbers. But I know, too that many a Lovely, Refined, Pure Lady can think up more dirt in a minute than a man could commit in a year. And nine times out of ten, you come to your marriages thinking such dirt, chockful of suspicions, prickly with Little Plans for Managing Men.

Then you wonder why YOUR man falls for some comfortable Blond who at least lets him think he's getting a break! Wotta surprise! You ask for it, then you yell your head off when you get it! Yet you say Love "abused" you! Lady, you wouldn't recognize Love if God introduced you. Where you belong is on the Poison Squad!

AND LASTLY, YOU BROKEN-HEARTED MOTHERS . . . YOU MOTHERS WHO SPEND YOUR LIVES SOBBING ABOVE SOME GRAVE.

It is hard to talk to you, for I have been one of you, and I know your dreadful hurt. And yet you betray Love worst of all. You who have known real Love are betraying it with every tear . . . telling the world with every tear that Love was not worth while . . . that Love was not worth what it costs.

HOW DARE YOU STOP LOVING . . . YOU WHO HAVE ONCE KNOWN THE BEAUTY AND GENEROSITY OF LOVE? HOW DARE YOU SELL YOUR HEARTS . . . YOU WHOSE HEARTS ONCE KNEW THE GLORY OF GIVING?

It is not loving to be broken-hearted because of Love. It is shameful! You have no more right to keep a broken heart than you would to maintain a public nuisance! Hearts were meant to be used. You have used your heart . . . you can use it again. There are endless little ones starving for Love . . . crying out in the night for warm, mothering arms. There are endless men and women going lonely for lack of a friend or a mate. Yet you refuse to use your heart because your one Love has gone! YOU ARE A TRAITOR TO ALL THAT LOVE MEANS!

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK — Rehearsal shot: Time, 2:45 p. m.; place, Ethel Barrymore theater, 47th street; characters, Maxwell Anderson, author; Kurt Weill, composer; Walter Huston, star; Joshua Logan, director; Jeane Madden, ingenue; Richard Kollmer, juvenile; incidental people, noises, etc.

The title of the play is "Knickerbocker Holiday," based on early Dutch New York. Maxwell Anderson, his moustache faded by a long summer in the sun, is sitting in an orchestra seat up near the stage. He is garbed in inevitable, loosely fitting tweeds. With him is Kurt Weill, who wrote the music for the play. "Knickerbocker Holiday" is not exactly an operetta, and yet it is something more than a play with music. You'll have to decide for yourself.

THERE is a gibbet on stage and a group of the townsmen are gathered about it gleefully making laws. Joshua Logan, the director, is a young man who kicked around the Broadway theater more or less anonymously for several years and then leaped into prominence overnight. Last year he directed "On Borrowed Time," a great hit, and this year he directed "I Married an Angel," reigning musical triumph on Broadway.

Off to one side sits Jeane Madden, a pretty little blond, whose part in the play will be that of "Tina." Dick Kollmer, a Yale graduate, pleads with her. While he is pleading, "Tina," the director halts the action and turns to Anderson. "I think it would be better if we put an extra 'Tina' in there and called her name twice, like this — 'Tina, Tina'— if it's okay with you."

"Sure," agrees Maxwell Anderson amiably, "go ahead." Thus is a line of "Knickerbocker Holiday" amplified. Anderson is easy to work with. This action gives the lie to the belief that creative artists are touchy prima donnas who refuse to have their brain children tampered with.

Miss Madden, clad fetchingly in a yellow sweater and a plaid skirt, is sitting with her knees buckled under her, waiting her cue. Mr. Kollmer, the juvenile, has a lot of on-stage business to perform and he misses some of it. He forgets a line or so. Finally the director shouts, but pleasantly: "How did you get through Yale if you can't remember a four-word sentence?"

MEANWHILE, a nattily garbed figure saunters in, looking better than I have ever seen him. This is Walter Huston, who will play the part of Peter Stuyvesant in the play. He isn't supposed to do much rehearsing today, and he plops down next to Anderson and Weill. They talk in low tones. Kollmer gets his lines straightened out and calls "Tina." Meanwhile, Miss Madden has been sitting in one position so long that her legs have gone to sleep. At her cue she leaps up and almost falls. She stamps prettily to restore circulation, and then goes on.

All this seems of minor importance, but it isn't. It is an integral part of a vast and costly production which may make a lot of money and some reputations, or cost a small fortune and relegate certain people to a workless winter. The rehearsals go on day and night. There are about 25 of them on at this writing. It is the great "hurry" season, preparatory to prying the lid off the Broadway season for 1938.

Timely Editorial

This Stream Called America.

The national government, for good or ill, is embarked upon a variety of enterprises that a decade ago would have been regarded by both parties as beyond its scope. That is the fact that all of us, like it or not, have got to live with. The tendency to look to the government for the solution of economic problems is not new; it flourished under Mr. Hoover, bringing about a corresponding increase of national power, and it has grown steadily under Mr. Roosevelt. No set of politicians can stand against it and succeed.

The country's great problem—and it is one to challenge the best thought of Democratic and Republican leaders alike—may be compared to the problem of controlling a great river. What the country must learn to do is to turn the stream of national power to beneficent uses, while keeping dikes in repair against an overflow.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

PLAN MEMORIAL

Dayton Takes Steps to Honor Wright Brothers.

DAYTON—(AP)—Plans for converting a 20-acre tract of land owned by the Miami Conservancy district near Wright Army Air Corps field here, into a park and recreation center as a memorial to the Wright brothers have been approved by the Miami Conservancy court. The court recently was created composed of judges from nine counties affected by the conservancy law.

It is proposed to use $25,000 now held by the Wright Memorial commission here and which was raised by popular subscription several years ago for the park plan, and additional sums needed to be obtained by assessment against property in Miami, Montgomery and Greene counties.

Work in clearing the park area and in planting trees and shrubs will be done by CCC youths, the court was told.

VOLUNTEERS SUBSTITUTE WORK FOR DOLE IN AIDING TRANSIENTS

Down at the Volunteers of America headquarters on North Main street where indigents are taught to help themselves and others, preparations are under way for winter.

Twelve men, most of them homeless and without known relatives, are busy in the agency's industrial department, repairing old shoes and clothing to be distributed to needy families in the city.

As a nucleus of the Volunteers' welfare activities, the industrial department provides men with work, pays them, and serves as a repair shop for clothing and furniture.

Old newspapers and magazines donated by the public are baled by the men and sold to give them a small income, just enough to supply their needs. The shoes, clothing and furniture the workers repair will go to needy families this fall and winter.

Established last January by Capt. William P. Westcott, who is in charge of the Volunteers agency, the industrial department is the only self-supporting relief agency in the city, Capt. Westcott says. It has employed as many as 25 men at one time.

It helps to solve the transient problem in the city by providing wanderers with a home and something to do.

Capt. Westcott urged that persons who are asked for "a handout" on the street or at home, refer transients to the Volunteers agency at 278 North Main street where they will find sleeping quarters and food.

"The public is turning away from the practice of handing out doles, and requiring indigents to earn their own way whenever possible," Westcott pointed out, "and the Volunteers industrial department helps them to do that."

He said trucks would call at homes for articles of clothing, old furniture, shoes, magazines and newsppaers if persons who wish to donate to the agency will call Canal 4578.

GALION—Mrs. William Zuber was removed to her home on Grove avenue, Thursday afternoon following an operation at the Good Samaritan hospital 10 days ago.

MASSILLON BAND PARADES IN CITY SATURDAY NOON

90-Piece Unit Struts Through Business District Before High School Game.

The 90-piece Massillon high school band which will come to Mansfield tomorrow to play at the Mansfield-Massillon football game at Stadium Field, will parade through the downtown business district at noon, J. Merton Holcombe, director of the high school band, announced today.

Forming at this corner, they will march around the north side of the square to Main street, north on Main to Third street, west on Third to Mulberry, and south on Mulberry to Park avenue west where they will disband. A police escort will accompany the band.

The visiting bandsmen will be met at Stadium Field by the Mansfield band and Girls' drum and bugle corps of 124 pieces which will escort them to their seats at the south end of the stadium. Mansfield's band and drum corps will be seated at the north end of the field.

Both units will perform during the half. The Massillon band is directed by W. T. Bird and will appear here in its new uniforms.

(Available at Mansfield Public Library)

Books on aircraft are always acceptable to boys. The "Complete Model Aircraft Manual". New and revised edition, by Edwin T. Hamilton, contains 65 models, gliders, stick models, solid scale, built-up, non-flying scale, and flying scale models, with excellent plans and diagrams. At the back of the book is a complete aviation dictionary, glossary of model terms, and dealers list.

"Couriers of the Clouds" by Edward Shenton, is also a new and revised edition of a book that was out of print for a year. The book is divided into 4 parts: Part I—The Air Mail Yesterday; Part II—The Men Who Fly the Mail; Part III—The Air Mail 1925-1930; Part IV—The Air Mail Today and Tomorrow.

GALION—Funeral services were held this morning for the infant daughter, Lelabelle Mae Sites, of Leroy and Lillie Belle (Baldinger) Sites of 640 Crew avenue. The baby was born Wednesday and died Thursday morning.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Just get more fresh air, if hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMAN'S" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life.

Pinkham's is WELL WORTH trying.

HARVEST SEASON REFLECTED IN BOUNTIFUL WEEK-END MARKET

The picture of the harvest created by the Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley, will have its counterpart in Mansfield markets tomorrow when nearly everything the housewife can think of will be available for week-end dinners.

Epicurean palates will be tempted by pineapples from Cuba, persimmons, dry and green figs, cranberries, avocados, and fresh mushrooms. For those of simpler tastes all the root vegetables including parsnips, carrots, turnips and beets as well as celery and parsley root will be available.

Green things including head, butter and leaf lettuce, endive, spinach, broccoli, peas, wax and green beans, cauliflower, tomatoes, cabbages and Brussell sprouts will be shown tomorrow.

For those who enjoy the varieties of squash there are the summer, Italian and acorn. Florida grapefruit and California oranges appear with seedless, Tokay and big blue grapes on the fruit stands as melons continue to be profuse.

All varieties of onions and peppers for pickling also are ready for the shopper, as are artichokes, red and white radishes, cucumbers and eggplants.

ASKS TRUCK BIDS

WPA Acts to Put Drivers on Private Industry Basis.

Acting to place all WPA truck drivers on a private industry employment basis, the procurement division of WPA in Columbus today called for truck rental bids.

District WPA Director J. L. Kelley said that bids would be received at the procurement division office in Columbus until 10 a. m., Sept. 27.

Kelley pointed out that provisions of the change in procedure place WPA truck drivers on a strictly private contract basis The workers under the contract however, will still retain their certification on an inactive basis.

Specifications call for all 1½ and 2-ton truck, single or fleet, with bids on both hand and mechanical loading, the director said

Forms for bidding are available in Richland county at the office of the county surveyor, city engineer and the Mansfield post office.

Berrodin Fired As Pension Chief After Defying Davey

OUSTED AFTER AGREEING TO U. S. DEMANDS

Action Follows Statement to Federal Board That Ohio Will Correct Defects.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Henry J. Berrodin was fired by Welfare Director Margaret Allman today as chief of the state division of aid for aged.

His dismissal followed less than 24 hours after the Ohio Federation of Labor announced that Berrodin had agreed to defy Gov. Martin L. Davey's orders and accede to the federal social security board request for revision of the Ohio system.

Bevens Named.

Wray Bevens, secretary to Governor Davey in charge of clemency matters, was named to succeed Berrodin, who was appointed to the post shortly after Davey took office in 1935.

Mrs. Allman said in a letter to Berrodin:

"Effective at once your services as chief of the division of aid for the aged are terminated and you will immediately surrender the duties of your office to Mr. Wray Bevens."

Berrodin said that he had "no doubt" that his action in agreeing to accede to the social security board demands prompted Mrs. Allman's move.

"I have no bitterness toward the governor," Berrodin said. "The old age pension cause is greater. I have devoted the best part of my life to it and that is what I am interested in."

Berrodin wrote Davey, "I want to thank you for having made it possible for me to serve the aged people of the state of Ohio."

The division chief's position pays $4,000 yearly.

Berrodin's acquiescence was revealed late yesterday by the Ohio State Federation of Labor in a telegram to A. J. Altmeyer, chairman of the security board, in Washington.

Signed by Thomas J. Donnelly, secretary-treasurer of the federation, the message said in part:

"The executive board of the Ohio State Federation of Labor has given consideration to the controversy which has arisen between the . . . board and the administration of the Ohio law for aid for the aged.

"We have gone over with Mr. Henry J. Berrodin the demands made upon him by your board which must be compiled with if Ohio is to continue to receive federal funds. Our executive board is of the opinion that the demands are reasonable and has . . . recommended to Mr. Berrodin that he comply as far as possible. . . . Mr. Berrodin has accepted our recommendation and will communicate with you by mail at once."

Teacher Shot As Gunman Uses Her As Bullet Shield

CHICAGO—(AP)—A young dancing teacher, shot down while being used as a gunman's shield, battled for her life today, the aftermath of a furious gun fight in which two men were slain and four persons wounded.

The girl, Lucille Summerfield, 8, was caught in a crossfire of bullets when three gunmen trapped in a northside handbook during a holdup, tried to shoot their way past policemen. She was critically wounded.

The gunmen carried pistols and sawed-off shotguns when they entered the handbook late yesterday, a few doors from a police station.

John Bazaula, 33, part owner of the handbook, was ruthlessly slain when he refused to turn over the money.

Miss Summerfield was pleading with her captor and crying "please don't shoot" when she fell in the gunfire.

School Construction Work Starts Oct. 29

Up and Down THE STREET

Stenographers in the office of W. L. Miller, superintendent of schools, planned to hang a "No Men Wanted" sign on the office door today, after receiving a number of applications for jobs on the school building projects. Miller pointed out that no men will be hired for construction jobs until the building contracts are let, and even then his office will have nothing to do with the hiring. Contractors will employ men on labor jobs from the lists of the National Reemployment bureau.

A teacher at Hedges elementary school was puzzled when an eight-year-old girl asked to go to the principal's office to call the police. Inquiring into the cause of the girl's concern, the teacher received this reply from the troubled youngster: "Somebody stole my scooter off the front porch last night and I want the police to look for it. My folks are so careless about such things."

Three dogs make just one dog too many, even if the third one is a high grade bulldog, Mrs. Charles Costin, North street, East Mansfield, decided today, so she's looking for the owner of the bulldog. The animal, apparently of good stock and well trained, came to her home and she took him in, she said. But she already has two dogs, and that's enough. The owner can reach the Costin home by telephone by calling Dover 2057.

WHOSE CELLAR WILL BE FLOODED NEXT? THAT'S NEW 'GAME' NOW

Out on Sherman place and Helen avenue these days the question is—"just whose going to have water in the cellar next?"

It's rather like the old game of who's got the corner.

First the water began to back up into the cellar of Mr. A who lives on Helen avenue. The water came up with such force that it spouted into the air two feet.

Mr. A naturally went to work and placed a plug in the drain so the water which was making a miniature lake out of his cellar wouldn't back up when it rained.

When he plugged the hole, the water had to go somewhere so it spouted up in Mrs. B's cellar. Mrs. B. promptly resorted to the same methods as her neighbor.

As the recent rains fell the condition got worse and a big cry went up from some of the other property owners in the vicinity that the water was filling basements—and what it wasn't doing to furnaces, and with winter coming on.

When it finally extended into the Sherman place territory, Mrs. Jane C. Stroup, 484 Sherman place, raced down to the city building and reported that something would have to be done immediately. She couldn't get into her cellar without a boat, she said.

The water just kept backing up until it was four feet deep and it was ruining the furnace besides other property.

City officials said they were sorry but pointed out they couldn't do much because the sewer lines were constructed on private property years ago and roots of trees had grown into the small pipes. They explained because of the construction of the sewers the root cutter used by the sewer department to alleviate such conditions would not operate in the lines.

In the meantime, George Bolesky, superintendent of sewer maintenance, said he would look the situation over but didn't see what the city could do as the lines were not owned by the municipality.

STRICKEN HERE

Mrs. Harry Adams, Johnsville, Dies in Hospital.

Mrs. Harry Adams, 47, of Johnsville, died Thursday noon at General hospital following an illness of four weeks. She had been confined to the hospital for a month.

Clark of Lexington, Ky., and Marvin Clark of Long Island, N. Y., and two sisters, Mrs. May Adams of Columbus, and Mrs. L. G. Davis of Canton.

Funeral services will be held at 1:30 p. m. Saturday at the home, and at 2 p. m. at the Evangelical church with Rev. E. T. Shepard of Johnsville officiating. Burial will be in the Shauck cemetery.

ERECTION OF SHOP ADDITION OPENS PROGRAM

Razing of Simpson Junior High Delayed Until Jan. 1; Board Studies Pupil Shift.

Actual construction work on Mansfield's $1,000,000 school building program is scheduled to start about Oct. 29, on the Senior high school shop addition, Supt. W. L. Miller said today after conferring with PWA officials at Columbus.

The shop addition, to cost $25,000, will be the first step in the school program which was approved by voters at last Tuesday's election in voting a $550,000 bond issue to supplement a $450,000 PWA grant.

Meanwhile the regional PWA office today had granted school officials permission to delay razing of the John Simpson building until about Jan. 1. The delay will enable the school board and Supt. Miller to find substitute classrooms for the 1,300 pupils at the school while razing of the old building and construction of the new school is under way.

Open Bids Oct. 21.

The Mansfield board of education yesterday inserted its first advertisment for bids on the high school shop building. Bids will be opened Oct. 21, and construction is scheduled to begin as soon after the awarding of bids as the contractor can employ men and set up equipment.

PWA officials asked that the project be under way by Oct. 31 to comply with a federal ruling for PWA sponsored jobs.

Board of elections officials said today they would have a certification of the official vote cast in the bond issue election ready for the school board tonight or Saturday.

The school board's request for bids on the bonds will be held up until the certification, showing the actual vote is received.

SAVED BY RAIN!

Rotary Golfers Escape Licking as Weather Halts Match.

A touch of rain and an afternoon of threatening weather spared Rotarian golfers from another traditional defeat by Kiwanians Thursday afternoon on the occasion of the final of the summer's joint meetings at Westbrook Country club.

Charles W. Conklin, president of the Kiwanis club, presided at the dinner meeting and also evidenced versatility by leading in the singing.

An evening of bridge, with eight tables at play, tied at four tables each, high scoring Kiwanians having been T. R. Barnes and William F. Black, while Paul Tappan and Dale Ward were the Culbertson emulators for Rotary.

FAIR ENOUGH!

Mussolini Finds Himself Politico-Military Flunky Of Much Stronger Power

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—Adolf Hitler sounded a new note in diplomatic repartee when he called the president of Czechoslovakia a liar, and Mussolini has taken his pitch from his leader in this, as in other recent matters.

In his speech at Trieste, Mussolini, in essence, called Pope Pius a poor half-wit, describing thus all those who "try to make it believed that we have obeyed or imitated* or, worse, have been influenced" by the Nazis. To be sure, the Pope is not the only one who has observed the Duce's emulation of his German leader, but he is by far the most influential of those who have noted, in the large sense, the similarity of the so-called Paso Romano to the original goosestep. The Pope has been the most outspoken opponent of Mussolini's imitative anti-Semitism, and there can be no question that, in putting his finger on the truth, he tweaked the Duce's personal vanity.

Up to a few years ago Hitler was the imitator, and the Duce gloried in his role of originator. He was not even courteous when Hitler, still wearing his greasy, slept-in raincoat, made his first visit to Italy to study the original model at close range. The Duce even then had begun to adorn himself with tassels, golden ropes and other trappings which, in his imagination, seemed imperial, and looked upon the mildewed fuehrer with the contempt of a Hollywood star for a hungry extra. Hitler was just setting up in business and feeling his way at the time and frankly went to Mussolini to take lessons from one whom he thus acknowledged a master. Red-eyed, sallow and grubby and wearing a mustache invented by a Jewish comedian with purely comic intent, Hitler was to Mussolini as a barnyard chicken to a bird of paradise, and anyway, the duce disliked him personally.

Only three years ago, during Mussolini's visit to the Potemkin village of Pontinia, on the Mediterranean, an official of his foreign office, in charge of the ballyhoo division, informed the foreign press—in a little saloon, by the way—that the duce looked upon Hitler with the natural contempt of a census for a plagiarist.

Gradually—but irresistibly since then—Hitler has overtaken and passed the duce, and Mussolini has seen himself, his regime and Italy fall into the status of inferior partner in the axis.

Hitler pirated the duce's original plan but embellished it with the appeal of racial divinity, which he found in a museum of German political antiques, and acquired such power that Mussolini had to admit to himself that the crummy eccentric had something, after all.

The duce's trip to Munich seems to have been the point of his undoing. Bedight now in a fine uniform and surrounded by soldiers even more gaudy than the duce's own lion tamers, Hitler tooled him along dream streets of banners, bayonets and—not to fumble for a descriptive word—baloney, and sent him home blinking.

In the interval, awaiting Hitler's return visit, Mussolini drilled a company of his own troops in the goosestep, and nothing has been more deadly to Italian pride and the leader's prestige than this act of oblation. Either his soldiers couldn't learn the goosestep or their spirit rebelled, for they strode like so many girls of the junior league imitating the faultless fluency of the incomparable Rocketts. They floundered shockingly, and, although Mussolini attempted to salve his people by calling this act of tribute the Roman step, or Paso Romano, they would not have it by any name, and nothing has been heard of it since.

Transfixed in this unwise mood of trustfulness, the duce saw Hitler sweep down to his northern frontier, and he finds himself today the politico-military flunky of a power much stronger and bolder than himself.

RED FOOTPRINTS, NOT IN SAND, REMIND C. OF C. OF MEETINGS

Mansfield was peppered with red footprints today—but don't get excited about the possibility of a Communist invasion.

The red footprints were blotters, and they came from the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce, which, as you know, doesn't truckle with communism.

The blotters, to make the whole thing clear, are advertising the first of a series of monthly membership meetings, to be held next Tuesday evening, and at which Deloss Walker, associate editor of Liberty magazine will be the speaker.

On the footsteps—or blotters but in the shape of a foot—are the words "Step Forward with Mansfield."

That is the slogan for the series of meetings, and Paul W. Williams, C of C. secretary thought up the idea of sending out the steps. That is, the blotters.

Walker, a forceful speaker, sometimes called the "Billy Sunday of Business" will talk on "Community Building."

Tuesday night's meeting will be preceded by a dinner at the Mansfield-Leland hotel. The series of meetings was decided on by ballot of the members of the chamber, and Williams said today he expected a large turnout, due to the interest shown in starting the series.

NEW YORK—(INS)—Tammany Leader James J. Hines' second trial on charges he conspired with members of the "Dutch" Schultz mob to conduct a lottery today was set for the week following the November elections.

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, who has been mentioned as a possible Republican gubernatorial nominee, announced he would ask for a blue ribbon jury panel of 500 talesmen. In the first court proceedings, Hines won a mistrial. Three former Schultz henchmen — J. Richard Davis, George Weinberg and Harry Schoenhaus—who turned states evidence against Hines will be sentenced on Dec. 5.

JAPS DRIVE ON

Troops Seek to Cut Railroad to Provisional Capital.

SHANGHAI — (AP) — Japanese forces drove relentlessly toward Sinyang, 100 miles north of Hankow, today in the hope of cutting the railroad between Peiping and the provisional capital.

Chinese dispatches admitted this progress, but declared heavy fighting was going on along both banks of the Yangtze river where the invaders were striving desperately to hold hard-won positions in southeast Hupeh province.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — (INS — A grand jury today drew up its report on the alleged poisoning of Gov A. B. Chandler during his recent unsuccessful campaign to unseat U. S. Senator Alben W. Barkley.

Gov. Chandler testified before the jury yesterday about the ailment with which he was stricken on a speaking tour after drinking a glass of ice water.

Don't Be Goat All Your Life Adviser Says

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
Famous Authority On Problems of Love and Marriage.

The best of families have a way of "putting upon" some member, who will stand for it, without realizing how selfish is their attitude.

Swamped with their own concerns, they shuffle as much responsibility as possible on to the family "goat." He, or more often she, will take all the traffic will bear, and get precious little thanks for it. Take this girl's letter:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I was always the stay-at-home sister, perhaps because I was the oldest of a big family, and began to take care of the babies before I was ten years of age. I could never go out and play with the other children because I always had to push the baby carriage with a brand new little brother or sister.

Mother never meant to be unkind. She was overworked, and I was the answer to a great many of her responsibilities. It was the same thing with father.

So, one by one the brothers and sisters married. Father died, and I've been left with mother. Very foolishly I broke my engagement to the only man I ever loved, when I was 23 years of age, because I felt I should continue to take care of mother.

Mother has grown querulous and a little bit eccentric with advancing age, and I can get no help or co-operation from my brothers and sisters.

Now, right out of the blue,, I've had a chance to go to England with a friend of mine. She will pay all of my expenses and we are to travel in England, Scotland and Ireland, and I'm wild to go.

Tired of Being Dutiful.

"Pack your suitcases and go," is my suggestion, as long as you've asked me to umpire. All said and done, selfishness is as bad for those who practice it, as it is for the victims on whom it is visited. Call a family council. Get together the brothers and sisters you pushed in their perambulators, and tell them you feel entitled to a little holiday. And that the family problem is up to them till you return.

It's likely your family has no idea of how selfish it has been in letting you shoulder the entire care of your mother. At least take a firm stand, take this first opportunity to travel and declinc to be the family "goat" on this occasion at least.

HOROSCOPE

For Saturday, September 24.

A DAY of difficulties, delays, obstacles and much anxiety or perplexity is the augury based on the predominant mutual and lunar aspects. Withal, there may be sudden news of surprising action that may be considered constructive and create much high tension, but be wise with speech, writings and overindulgence with funds, all of which seem to be imperiled.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves beset by certain delays, postponements or setbacks during the year, although there are reassuring signs of sudden and surprising news that may greatly accelerate events and cause quick and drastic enterprise. But be cautious with speech, writings and do not put funds in jeopardy by extravagance or indulgence.

A child born on this day may be nervous, high-strung or erratic, although quite talented in original lines, possibly to the point of intellectual genius. It may find balance and stability in profound study or scientific research.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

I HAVE heard and read many times about joy transfiguring faces, but never have I seen so striking a concrete illustration of the trite old saying than Noel's countenance presented when the full meaning of my inquiry, "Why don't you go to the city and find out for yourself?" finally registered in his consciousness.

And then quiet Noel astonished me by seizing me in his arms, lifting me clear of the ground and swinging me around in an exaggerated dance step.

"You best of all good fairies!" he ejaculated as he set me down. "Do you really mean I'm going up to the city to see Mary? But you can't mean anything else! When can I start?"

I paused for an instant, considering ways and means. The car? Yes, there would be room. I came back to Noel's anxious face.

"Your uncle and Bill and Henry are going up in an hour or two," I said. "We're having Hank see a physician in the morning—and I'm going to drive in tomorrow. You may go either time."

Offers to Go With Her.

Even his longing yielded to his innate chivalry.

"You will need me tomorrow. I will go then," he said, and the words were not a question but an assertion.

"You're awfully sweet, Noel," I said, "but I shall not need you at all. It will be broad daylight, and there will be no danger whatever. In all probability I shall have a guard until we get well past the vicinity of the farm. So if you wish to go tonight, there is nothing to keep you."

"If I wish!" he repeated, and I wished Mary could hear the fervor in his voice. It was a tribute which any wife worthy of the name would hug to her heart.

"Then you're going with your uncle and the boys," I told him. "Now you'd better stretch out and snatch a bit of sleep if you can—rest anyway—while I have Katie get you something to eat."

"Rest! Food!" he said scornfully. "I don't need anything. This news is meat and drink and sleep and—"

Is Noel Afraid?

"I know, Noel," I said quickly and sympathetically. "But you need both rest and food, and you're going to get both right away."

I turned away, but he put a detaining hand upon my arm.

"Wait!" he urged. "Of course, I realize how cleverly you've planned this, so that my father cannot check upon my movements, but—have you considered how angry he's going to be?"

"Yes, dear boy, I know all about it. I know more than you think. But just what is it you fear from your father about this? Fear for Mary?"

"And for you," he said quickly. "He never would forgive you if he found it out, and you know how vindictive he can be."

"Nobody knows better about that than I do, dear boy," I told him, "but do not consider me for an instant. Besides, I have no idea of letting your father find out about your trip to see Mary. Incidentally, it is a trip I have planned from the first to have you make. I never promised your father to keep you and Mary apart. And I am sure we can manage it so he will never find out about it. Nobody here will tell him, ever."

Noel looked convinced but still troubled.

"But the hotel," he said slowly. "I am afraid he has spies there."

Hamburger May Be Served Many Ways

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

Good old hamburger really is a universal dish as anyone knows who has made a coast-to-coast trip on a border-to-border trip in this fair land of ours. Hamburgers, especially, of course, are patties made of ground beef, but many parts of the country have different ways of preparing them.

In the west chopped onion and sage are added to the meat before it is shaped into thick cakes for broiling or frying. Tomato catsup is poured over the meat when it has been cooked.

In the east, onions and mustard, spread over the thin cakes before broiling, please the customers.

The south has its own particular version of this popular food, and very good it is, too. Southern hamburger is our first recipe today. For a pound of steak, you need one small, tart apple, one-third cup of bread crumbs, tablespoon New Orleans molasses, one egg yolk, teaspoon onion juice, two teaspoons salt, one-eighth teaspoon each of pepper and nutmeg and some extra-fine bread crumbs. Soak the one-third cup bread crumbs in milk. Chop apple fine and add it to the steak with the molasses, egg yolk and seasonings. Next mix in the soaked bread. Form the mixture into small balls, roll them first in milk and then in fine, dry bread crumbs. Fry in deep fat until brown.

Spanish Dish.

Now for a novel dish that comes from Spain, a dish that we have eaten and enjoyed in happier times. We are afraid that not many cooks in war-torn Spain have time or the "makings" for delicious chicken paella, a dish popular in the south. The dish takes its name from the iron pot or casserole in which the Spanish women folk cook and serve it. But any iron pot or deep skillet or kettle will do. For one plump chicken, cut as for fricassee, there is needed two dozen small clams, two dozen slices of cervelat sausage, or frankfurters or Spanish sausage, rice, chicken stock and seasonings. Heat one cup of olive oil in an iron pot, then add two medium-sized onions cut into thin slices, and the pieces of chicken which have been well seasoned with salt, pepper and a sprinkling of paprika. Let onions and chicken brown thoroughly, then add to the pot a demitasse of uncooked rice for each person to be served. Add cup by cup an equal number of standard cups of boiling chicken stock. Add the clams in their well-washed shells and also slices of sausage. Finally add two pinches of saffron to give the rice a yellow tint. Let the pot cook until the rice is done but not too soft. Garnish with strips of pimento and put under broiler for two minutes. Serve piping hot.

Sallow Skin Treated Internally

By MME. QUI VIVE

When women wore wide-brimmed hats, heavy veils and carried sunshades it was to protect the peaches-and-cream complexion. We've stepped long strides along the beauty road since then. With synthetic blushes in general use, pallor has disappeared. The golden girl is pretty because she looks healthy and athletic. But the darling who is cursed with a sallow complexion still has her worries. No cosmetic magic has been found that will disguise it. Rouge doesn't help. It stands out like a sore thumb.

Fruits Aid.

Citrus fruits are highly recommended. If you happen to be burdened with a complexion that carries a yellow cast, eat half a grapefruit for breakfast or, before breakfast, take the juice of half a lemon in a glass of cold water, adding a dash of salt.

Buttermilk contains elements that clear the complexion of dinginess of pigment. Drink a quart a day, with meals or between meals, as your little heart desires. Apples are helpful. Eat one before you go to bed. Grapes stimulate the intestinal tract, rate high among fruits that make complextions toe the beauty mark.

The diet should be light and nutritious. An excess of meat is a strain on the digestive motors, especially if the fiber is tough. Avoid that.

Watch Elimination.

The avenues of elimination—lungs, kidneys, intestinal tract and skin—must function actively. To aid them in their work of carrying off wastes, breathe deeply, drink plenty of water, eat bulky green vegetables like celery, cabbage, spinach and cerely; bathe daily. The daily bath with warm soap suds and a heavy brush will do wonders to bring loveliness to the complexion.

Local treatment consists of sponging the face once a day with lemon juice, using cold cream freely after the facial tubbing at night, frictioning it in to enliven the blood streams.

Colors becoming to the sallow-faced girl are black, coral, navy, soft shades of green. Never brown, purple or white.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

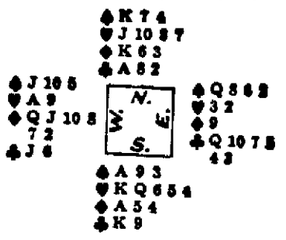
"The Authority on Authorities"

DON'T LOSE A WINNER

If the defenders are going to win a trick by ruffing, wouldn't you prefer to have it be a trick you would have lost anyway? Wouldn't that be better than having them take a trick you had expected to win? Then try to govern your moves accordingly, protecting your prospective winners and risking only the cards which are of no value to you anyway.



(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

This deal was played in a team-of-four game, and at both tables the contract was 4-Hearts by South. At one table it was made and it was defeated at the other.

The diamond Q was led in both instances. Where the trick was won with the A, declarer then led a heart. When West won with the A he led the diamond J, on which dummy's K was played and East ruffed. When a spade trick was lost the defenders captured another diamond.

At the other table the declarer won the first diamond trick with the K. Then when the heart A was driven out and West returned the diamond J, a low card was played from dummy and East ruffed, but South retained his diamond honor. As a result only two hearts and a spade were cashed against him.

SHERIFF FIGHTS CHICKEN THEFTS

Demands Produce Dealers Keep Records of Purchases of Fowls, Stock, Produce.

In a drive against chicken thieves in the county, Sheriff E. P. Long said today he would demand strict enforcement of the new state law requiring produce dealers to keep complete records of purchases of fowls, livestock, and farm products, and descriptions of the persons from whom the purchases were made.

Long said a few dealers in the county had not been complying with the law, and blamed an epidemic of chicken stealing on their failure to keep records.

"I'll see that every dealer in the county is following the law, and if I find violations I'll bring the violators into court," he said.

The law, which went into effect recently, is designed to enable officers to check on the sale of stolen chickens and to make it difficult for thieves to dispose of their loot.

Violation of the law makes the violator subject to a fine of from $10 to $500. Sheriff's officers and highway patrolmen are authorized to make arrests in cases of refusal to comply with the law.

A series of chicken thefts have plagued farmers in the northern half of the county in recent weeks, leading county authorities to believe that the same persons were involved in all the thefts and are disposing of the chickens at the same place.

DOG MOURNS AND BRINGS FLOWERS

Sees Floral Tributes to Deceased Friend and Acts.

PETERSBURG, Ind. — (AP) — Spotty, a dog owned by Rufus Fowler, sat watching friends and relatives take flowers to the casket of Mrs. Joseph O'Rourke.

The woman had been one of Spotty's best friends, which may explain the dog's reasoning when he finally jumped up, crossed the road to a petunia bed, chewed off several blossoms and trotted back to the O'Rourke house.

There he placed the flowers at the door of the room wherein lay the dead woman.

START OWN FIRE

Firemen Blow Whistle and Then Blaze Breaks Out.

MONROE, Wis — (AP) — A fire was started in the firehouse when one of the firemen blew the noon whistle.

A short circuit in the electric wiring started the blaze, which was extinguished before much damage was inflicted.

AWAITS CLAIMS

Conservancy District Issues Forms to Land Owners.

The way was opened today for Richland county property owners in the Muskingum Conservancy district to collect easement fees and payments for land appropriated by the conservancy district.

Application forms must be obtained from Clerk of Courts Fred R. Zellner at the courthouse, filled out, and mailed to the Tuscarawas county clerk at New Philadelphia, conservancy district officials, or left with Zellner.

Applications must show all claims to conservancy funds. If approved by the conservancy court, checks will be mailed to property owners from New Philadelphia.

Property holders who appealed from the amount offered by the conservancy district will not receive their payments until the appeals have been heard by a court, Boyd Roebuck, head conservancy commissioner, said.

ANNE PARRISH'S NOVEL RANKS AT TOP OF BOOKLIST

'Mr. Despondency's Daughter' of Especial Interest Here, Reviewed by 2 Clubs.

Of especial interest to Mansfielders because of the recent review given before two of the city's study clubs is "Mr. Despondency's Daughter" by Anne Parrish which is the top ranking selection at the library this week. The book is a new treatment of the theme of a selfish woman.

Lisa, in her old age, is jarred out of her complacency by the remark of a stranger who states that her son, Francis, is contemplating suicide. Reviewing her life, a gradual awakening comes to Lisa. This is one of the most moving things in recent literature, and the tenderness and understanding with which it is set down throw fresh light on the author's creative powers.

Two other current novels are "Spring Always Comes" by Elizabeth Cambridge, and "Images in a Mirror" by Sigrid Undset. The first tells the story of a family and the working out of each individual member's destiny. Mrs. Undset tells of a woman whose memories of glamorous days as an actress cloud her domestic horizon.

Other new fiction includes "Twittering Bird Mystery" by Bailey, "Whenever I Choose" by Blake, "Prelude for War" by Charteris and "Sound of Rowlocks" by Steele.

Timely Non-Fiction.

With the entire European situation uppermost in the mind of nearly everyone, some of the non-fiction selections are particularly pertinent. "House that Hitler Built" by Stephen Henry Roberts is the objective picture of the leader, the cabinet, the party and the effect of the Nazi regime on Germany. A professor of the University of Australia, Roberts has lived in Germany and had access to many sources of information which have made his book an important one.

A play, "The Ghost of Yankee Doodle" by Sidney Howard deals with a western American family faced with the necessity of choosing between closing down their factory to maintain neutrality or running it to fill war orders.

Dorothy Thompson has formulated the problem of dispossessed racial and political minorities, giving briefly the history and offering practical ideas for a solution in her book "Refugees." "At the Paris Peace Conference" by James T. Shotwell tells all about the document which Hitler is now trying to ignore. "My Days" by Eleanor Roosevelt is a collection of her columns which have been published by a syndicate during the last two years.

A wide variety of non-fiction selections on the library shelves include "Across Spoon Rivers" by Masters; "Fireman; Practice Tests for Civil Service Examinations" by Pergande Publishing company; "United States Army in War and Peace" by Spaulding; "Training for the Public-Service Occupations" by Hawke; "History of the Canadian Pacific" by Gibbon; "Help Yourself Lessons Book 1 and 2" by Talbot; "Savage Hits Back" by Lips; "Gardener's Day Book" by Wright; "Shenandoah Pottery" by Rice; "Theory and Practice of Design" by Jackson; "Having a Wonderful Time" by Kober; "Designed for Reading" edited by Conby and others; "My Sister, "Eileen" by McKenney, and "Memoirs of Julian Hawthorne" edited by Hawthorne.

THEY GOT THERE

Youths Travel 1,200 Miles in Six Days on Bikes.

NEWBERG, Ore.—(INS)—Strong legs carried Paul Finlay, 20, Dion Di Bitt, 21, from Los Angeles to Newberg, nearly 1,200 miles, in six days.

The youths rode bicycles of French and Italian make from their homes in Los Angeles in order to visit Finlay's cousin here, averaging nearly 200 miles a day during the trip.

LURING BACK MALE TEACHERS

Better Pay Brings Back Many Deserters.

WASHINGTON—Men are staging a comeback as teachers of the next generation.

The office of education of the United States says that better wages are bringing men back into the school rooms.

Around 1880, some 42 per cent of the nation's teachers were men, but by 1920, most of these had deserted the rule for other pursuits. In that year only 14 per cent of the teachers were male.

Since 1920, however, there has been a steady increase, and at present more than 20 per cent of the teachers are men. In the same period salaries have steadily increased to an annual average of about $1,200.

UPHOLDS RENO MYTH

RENO, Nev. — (U.P.) — Concrete evidence is now available to sustain the sometimes scoffed at myth that Reno divorcees throw their wedding rings into the Truckee river. Sam Buzzar and H. A. Mellors of Pennsylvania were gazing into the river from the Center street bridge when they spotted a blazing diamond. They obtained rubber boots waded in and came back with a diamond set wedding ring.
